

VARSAITY TAKES WORKOUT BEFORE KANSAS BATTLE

Fair Grounds Coliseum Is Scense of Practice for Defense.

DEMONSTRATE TRICKS

Coach Bible Reviews Offense Operations; Manley Calls Signals.

By BOB GLOVER.

A steady downpour Wednesday afternoon forced the Cornhuskers to hold their practice in the coliseum at the fair grounds. This eliminated extensive scrimmage, but Coach Dana X. Bible advanced his squad another notch in defensive operations.

A select freshman team was used first to demonstrate several trick plays that will undoubtedly be part of the Kansas Aggie offense at Manhattan Saturday. These fresh were labeled with the names of the Aggie men who will probably start the game and showed the moves they can be expected to make on these plays. Coach Lehman's rubins then took the field and further illustrated Aggie running plays and passes. Again the fresh were used to show the formation usually used by McMullen's men when receiving the kickoff. This formation has a shifting wedge effect and is hard to penetrate.

Strong Backfield.

Manley, Sauer, Masterson, and Kreizinger were the backfield in the first lineup against the freshmen while the line contained Kilbourne and Joy, ends; Rhea and Adams, tackles; Koster and Gilbert, guards; and Ely, center. This team had a short scrimmage to develop the defensive on running plays and delayed line plunges. Another varsity team worked on pass defense against the rubins. In this lineup were Nesmith and Petz, ends; Hulbert and Schmitt, tackles; DeBus and Bishop, guards; McPherson, center; and Roby, Staab, Paul, and Penny in the backfield. These men showed considerable improvement in blocking and in breaking up passes.

When the rubins were put on buses and shipped back to the stadium, the Huskers settled down to work on their own offense. With Kreizinger, Masterson, Sauer, and Manley in the backfield and Petz alternating with Durkee and Joy at the ends, Rhea and Adams at guards, Koster and O'Brien at tackles, and Ely at center, the varsity took the ball in a dummy scrimmage and were successful in working many good runs and passes against the freshmen. Manley was calling signals and Sauer was doing most of the ball carrying.

The entire squad, with the exception of Justice, was suited up and nearly every man was put into the scrimmage. Lewis Brown was at practice, but did not see action. It is not yet certain that he will be able to play against Kansas State this Saturday.

Coach Bible emphasized the importance of Auker and Cronk as two key men in many of the key plays. Graham is another formidable opponent who will be in their lineup this week end.

SOONER-OIL CITY TILT WILL DRAW BIG GATE

Oklahoma Schools Complete Plans for Charity Engagement.

NORMAN.—That the Owen field attendance record of 18,346 people, set here at the Oklahoma-Nebraska game of 1928, will fall with a crash when the Oklahoma City University and the University of Oklahoma piskin squads, each strengthened by its freshmen and fourth year players, clash at Norman early in December in a charity game, is the belief of Ben G. Owen, the Sooner athletic director. Director Owen also looks for a big crowd at Skelly field, Tulsa, on Dec. 12 when the Sooners vie the Golden Hurricane in a charity fray there. Details of this contest were arranged at a meeting here Monday afternoon attended by Chancellor J. D. Finlayson, Dean R. L. Langenheim and Athletic Director J. B. Miller of Tulsa university. This meeting was very harmonious, all details being settled in less than an hour.

In the Tulsa-Sooner fray tickets may be sold by charity organizations in any city or town in Oklahoma, each of which will keep the entire proceeds of its own ticket sale for use of its own charity. A similar plan will be followed in the Sooner-Oklahoma City university game.

Sooners Will Use Freshmen.

Also the Sooner team will use its freshmen players and fourth year undergraduates against the Hurricane. This means that "Bus" Mills, Clyde Kirk, Bob Fields and Curtis Berry, members of the Sooner team last year who are again in school this year, will be eligible for the fray as well as such sterling freshmen at Stacey and Lowry, the 215 pound Boomer tackles, Leonard McFee, all-state fullback from Pawhuska, Bud Broding, all-state quarterback from Enid, T. Ray Phillips, all-state guard from Oklahoma City and a host of others.

Addition of its freshmen, who were good enough this September to hold the varsity to a 10-7 victory, and of Mills, Kirk, Berry and Fields should strengthen the somewhat battered Sooners wonderfully. All the freshmen players are in excellent trim while the older players like Mills, Kirk, Berry and Fields have been on the practice field daily and have another month to get into condition. Fields would probably be used at center and would be sorely needed there in view of Paul Young's present incapacitation.

Director Owen believes the use of freshmen and fourth year players by both teams will make the games bigger money makers than ever.

Mills Would Pull Spectators.

"Take, for instance, Bus Mills, explains Owen, "Mills was an all-Big Six quarterback in 1930 and kicked the field goal that let the West defeat the East. His presence in the Sooner lineup would pull the spectators. The same thing goes for our freshman players. Take Nigger Robinson, our freshman halfback from Seminole, for example. Seminole people who would not ordinarily care to see these games would drive to Norman and Tulsa if Robinson played. The same thing goes for our freshmen. "Remember, the idea of charity football is to draw the most money."

The University of Oklahoma has been generous in its negotiations for the two charity contests. Altho proponents for charity football in Oklahoma were asking that Oklahoma play but one game, the Sooner officials realize they are biting off quite a chunk in volunteering to meet both Tulsa and Oklahoma City universities, each of whom is all victorious at the present writing.

Both Teams to Use Fresh.

Nor have the Sooners been insistent that its opponents play Big Six rules. When Oklahoma City university athletic officials quite naturally demurred at barring their freshmen and also their fourth year players such as Anderson, Hand, Wilkerson, Kamp and Morgan, the backbone of their team, Sooner officials petitioned the Big Six conference to waive the restriction against freshmen fourth year players so that the Goldbugs might use all their undergraduates, a plan that will make for a much more attractive game than were their freshmen and fourth year players.

Altho the Big Six not only has a three year rule and a freshmen rule but also prohibits freshmen competition as such, it recognized the charity emergency and without hesitation abrogated its two strictest eligibility requirements so that the Sooners might use their freshmen and fourth year men and thus meet the Goldbugs and the Hurricane upon their own elastic eligibility requirements.

VEENKER SUCCESSFUL AS FOOTBALL MENTOR

Iowa State Coach Deserted Big Ten Job to Lead Cyclones.

WAS COLLEGIATE STAR

AMES, Iowa.—A yearning to take over the duties of a head football coach lured George F. Veenker away from his Big Ten job as head basketball and assistant football coach at the University of Michigan. He assumed complete charge of gridiron activities at Iowa State college. Firmly entrenched at the Big Ten university because of his success in basketball—he had one championship and two third place teams in the three years he directed basketball at Ann Arbor—Veenker was not at first considered among the 175 men who applied for the Iowa State job when Coach Noel Workman resigned last spring. But it developed that his first love was football. He had a remarkable record of high school gridiron success in Indiana, and he had been spoken of as "the brains of the football staff" at Ann Arbor. Consequently he was chosen as the ideal man for the place at Ames, when it developed that he wanted a head coach's job.

Coached Basketball.

Veenker's basketball work at Michigan, as a matter of fact, came more by chance than design. He was an assistant coach at Michigan in 1928, when Ed Mather, basketball mentor, died. He took over the squad and guided it to a Big Ten championship at the end of the season.

Tracing his gridiron record back a few years, it is not hard to see why he loves his football. As an undergraduate at St. Lawrence university and Hope college, Holland, Mich., he won major letters in football, baseball, basketball and track. Following the war during which he served in the army air service, Veenker coached football for one and a half years at Hammond, Ind. From there he went to Emerson high school, Gary, Ind., where he made an impressive record.

During the eight years that he coached the two Indiana high schools his teams annexed six state championships. For four consecutive years he coached undefeated teams, and in 1922 and 1923 his teams were not scored upon.

Went to Michigan.

In 1926 Michigan enlisted his services for football and basketball. He coached the backfield in 1926, and ends in 1927 and 1928, and tackles and ends in 1929 and 1930, in addition to his work on the basketball floor.

Veenker also found time to write while at Michigan. His book entitled "Basketball for Coaches and Players" is considered by Louis Menze, head basket ball coach at Iowa State, as the best book ever written in that field. With his assumption of the football directorship at Iowa State, Cyclone followers hope for a change in football fortunes. Veenker is a fighter and his spirit is imparting itself to the large squad he has working for him. The sixteen successive defeats with which the Iowa State team closed the 1930 season seem to have no meaning for Veenker.

No Respect for Precedent.

He shows little respect for precedent in another direction. Though 11 letter men reported to him at the first practice this fall, he made it clear at once that present performance, not past glory, would win places on his 1931 eleven. The lineup in the opening game against Simpson next Saturday will show a number of new faces; some of last year's letter winners are pretty sure to be watching the kickoff from the side lines. Veenker's humor in the field sometimes puzzles his players. At times they have found it hard to decide whether or not he is serious. But they are liking his methods more and more, and observers say that the squad is in its new coach from the surest first string man to the last substitute.
