

MUSICAL SORORITY HAS 'FOUNDER'S DAY'

Celebrates Twenty-Eighth Anniversary With Banquet.

HAVE MUSIC PROGRAM

Mu Gamma chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon, national honorary musical sorority, celebrated the twenty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the organization at a formal banquet at the University club Friday evening.

Miss Ardeth Pierce, president of the local chapter, presided as toastmistress. The theme of the toasts was "Mu Phi Travels" in anticipation of the approaching convention this spring in Kansas City, where Mu Gamma will be hostess.

CAMPUS LEADERS DEPLORE SPIRIT

They believe that campus politics had a great deal to do with the present situation. They suggested as a remedy for the trouble that politics be left entirely out of the question or that political organization be changed to a fairer basis.

editor of the Cornhusker, declared, "There does seem to be a lack of interest on the part of most of the students in the campus activities. This is probably caused by the political situation. Competition is necessary and when one group predominates the field, interest is killed."

Jack Thompson, business manager of the Daily Nebraskan, thought that politics had something to do with the situation. He said, "It is evident that there is a lack of interest in activities in general. I believe that there are two reasons for this. One is that faction politics have become so one-sided as to eliminate much of the element of competition. Another reason for the decline is that men who do attempt to represent the various organizations on the campus are liable to unjust criticism. The situation discourages many men who would otherwise be student leaders."

Alumni See Lack. It is apparent to alumni of the university that there is a change. Students are not so energetic as they were in former years. Even as recently as four years ago, according to Oscar Notling, a former editor of the Daily Nebraskan, there were thirty-five or forty reporters available each afternoon. Among them were capable men who competed enthusiastically for the best assignments.

Today the situation is entirely different. There is a mere handful of reporters on hand, and the best assignments go to a few because there is nothing else to do. There are not very many reliable and faithful reporters.

Marvin Robinson, editor of the Argwan, declared that the campus humor publication was not suffering from a lack of ambitious workers. He said, "I believe that the trouble in the case of student publications is that they have been held back. They need a chance to grow unhampered. And I have not noticed that students have become less interested in activities. I believe that skill is lacking in most instances."

Groups Push Man. Otis Detrick, editor of the Cornhusker, said that the cause underlying the lack of interest in activities was due to the political situation on the campus. He stated that he could think of no effective remedy for the situation at the time. His statement is: "There is a very evident lack of interest on the part of the students in activities. The cause is probably due to the political factions. It has been the custom, also, for groups to push one man into as many activities as possible to the possible exclusion of other men who are good."

Ag college activities are affected in the same way. The decline has become almost acute in the past few years. George Round, editor of the Cornhusker Countryman, stated, "I have noticed on the Ag campus in the past few years that students are not as interested in activities as they formerly were. It is hard to say what the cause of this decline is, but it may be due to the lack of proper leadership."

A different light on the situation was revealed in the statement of Art Wolf, member of the Innocents society, who pointed out that activities make possible benefits and rewards which outlast one's college career. He refers to the value of friendships made while working as a part of an education.

No Friends In Class. Wolf made the following statement: "Fifty percent of the education we get here comes as a result of our contacts and friendships, and we certainly don't make a large number of friends or even acquaintances while in the classroom or while studying. "The only way to make friends on the campus is to get into activities, as many as possible. The more activities one is interested in, the more friends he will have. Working together for a common cause is a binding force and makes for the staunchest of friends. "The outlook of people who do not indulge in activities becomes narrowed to the sphere of the fraternity or sorority or rooming house and the classroom. There is much more to college life than that. The solution is difficult to find. I cannot say what it is. A concentrated effort on the part of every campus organization can do a great deal toward finding it," he concluded.

Berenice Hoffman, president of the A. W. S. board, said that co-operation among all activities on the campus would help a great deal toward restoring student interest and would bring about a spirit of willingness and ambition. Attributes Various Reasons. Miss Hoffman said: "There are several reasons why students have

Edwin Faulkner, president of the Student Council and member of the Innocents society, pointed out that students are hurting themselves by not participating in the many campus activities which are open to them. He said: "There are many benefits to be derived from participation in the various activities, and if students do not take advantage of these opportunities, it is their own loss. I believe that a better understanding on the part of the students of activities would help to arouse interest."

Marvin Voo Seggern, president of the Interfraternity Council and member of the Innocents society, declared, "It is a fact that student interest in activities is dying out. Either they are too lazy or they don't care enough about them to participate. The trouble with them is that they want immediate returns on their work and some enjoyment, and they do not want to work very hard for it."

Faculty members and prominent alumni of the university who are interested in student activities could not be reached yesterday for a statement as to their opinions on the situation. Many have indicated, however, that they also have noticed that students are not as interested in activities as they formerly were. After all, it's a Townsend's photograph that you want.—Advq.

HAGER PLANS COED PARTY

Annual Women's Party to be Held in Armory on December 11.

Miss Gwendolyn Hager, Lincoln, member of A. W. S. board and Mortar Board society, has been chosen to direct all arrangements for the annual Cornhusker Coed Party, which will be held December 11 in the Armory. The affair is sponsored by the A. W. S. board. Dorothy Orr, Kappa Alpha Theta, is in charge of the invitation of judges for the costumes and of the music. At this affair, more than five hundred women students will don special costumes for the occasion.

Mildred Gish Kappa Delta, will have charge of making the posters and advertisement for the party. Carolyn Van Anda is chairman of publicity, and reservations and minor arrangements will be handled by Harriett Dunlap.

Others in charge of plans for the party are: Aileen Neely, Gertrude Clarke, Marian Smith, Margaret Upson, and Helen Baldwin. Prizes will be awarded to the guests wearing the prettiest, the cleverest, and the homeliest costume.

what a western conference championship team can do."

As a reminder of the importance of instilling spirit into the team in preparation for the battle with Pitt, Mitchell recalled the results of last year's game with the eastern school. "The game was a nothing to nothing tie, as you all remember," he said, "and this year the lines of the two teams are practically the same. If students show real enthusiasm and spirit at tomorrow's rally at the stadium, there is no reason why we can't sheath the claws of the Pitt Panther."

Coach Jock Sutherland's grid-ers have gone thru a season as successful as Nebraska has, the Panthers having been defeated only once, by Notre Dame.

"Pitt, however, did not play yesterday," the rally chairman explained, "so they will probably be in good shape to meet the Huskers. It is of prime importance," he concluded, "that we as true Nebraskans, climax the season by sending the team east with a spirit that will be the downfall of Pittsburgh. Be at the south gate of the stadium tomorrow afternoon at 5 and show every man of the squad we will be with him in spirit on the long eastward trip."

IOWA WINS DISTANCE RUN

Cyclone Tracksters Take Count Over Husker Two-Milers.

Nebraska's two milers bravely weathered a cold north wind yesterday during the half of the Nebraska-Iowa State game, only to be overcome by the Cyclone runners from across the Missouri. The Cornhuskers had the short end of the team score, which was 35 to 20.

In the event, Chapman finished a strong first for Iowa State, Eichelkraut of Iowa State was second, Storey of Nebraska was third, and Duncan of Iowa State came in fourth. Fifth and sixth places went to Morrow and Ayres of Nebraska, and the next three places were taken by Chisholm, Saboe, and Labertew of Iowa State. Blazer and Seger of Nebraska followed Labertew in, and England of Nebraska brought up the rear.

PHI PSI HOUSE ROBBED

$170 in Cash, Jewelry and Clothing Stolen Friday Morning.

The second robbery within a month and a half at the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity house, 1548 "S", occurred between 3 and 4 o'clock yesterday morning. The amount lost totaled about $120 which included twenty dollars in cash, a leather traveling bag, topcoat, two wrist watches, lounging robe, two suits, buckskin jacket, a valuable pen, a pair of shoes and a shirt. The first robbery, earlier in the year, of this fraternity amount to about $120. No clues as to the identity of the thieves in either robbery were left.
