minutes for his presentation which will include both constructive argument and refutation. The first affirmative speaker, however, will have his time divided, giving first a five minute construction argument, and ending the debate with a four minute rebuttal.

Will Give Both Sides.

Although competition is individual, the speakers will listen to the arguments of the opposite side of the question which they will be expected to refute. Three judges will choose the winner of the contest on the basis of knowledge of the general subject, adaptation of material to the issues involved, and skill in speaking. Particular attention will be given by the three judges to the refutation, and to the ability to speak extemporaneously. Several freshmen have already entered their names as contestants with Prof. H. A. White. All others who expect to compete must draw to Mr. White not later than 9 a. m. Monday. Any freshman in the university is eligible to participate in the debate. BOXING SQUAD GIVES EXHIBITION MATCHES

Meet Serves as Try-Out For State A. A. U. Friday.

Coach Rudy Vogeler's boxing squad gave an exhibition meet Saturday afternoon at the coliseum which was in reality a try-out for the coming annual State A. A. U. meet at Omaha Friday. Vogeler said, however, that the results of Saturday's contest will not indicate definitely who will make the trip, but that the condition and improvement shown by squad members during the coming week will be taken into consideration.

There will be entries from the University of Nebraska in all but the 112 pound and the heavy-weight class. The amateur championships of Nebraska will be decided at Omaha Friday night. Last year members of the Nebraska squad took four second places.

The university will also be represented in the junior A. A. U. contest for Iowa, Nebraska, North and South Dakota in January, and the senior A. A. U. meet which will take the form of an Olympic try-out sometime in February or March.

One knock-out featured the Saturday performance when Bernard Malcolm, 146 pounds, won over Joe Clema, 141 pounds, by a knock-out in the first round. Clema was on one knee and struggling to get on his feet as the count of ten was called. There was a near knock-out in the battle between Howard Houston, 149 pounds, and Evan Moses, 147 pounds. Houston had Moses groggy during nearly the entire final round, putting him down for the count of five early in the round.

The exhibition, slated for 3 o'clock, started with a bout between Glenn Heady and Richard Foland. The fights were for three two minute rounds. Heady won with the last two rounds to his credit. Marion Stevenson won two rounds from Glenn Athey, both sharing the first round. They fought in the light weight class. "Duke" Ross, 155 pounds, won two rounds from Rodell Severson, 150 pounds, the first round being a draw.

John Evans, 128 pounds, won over Frank Woods, 127 pounds, by one round, the first and third rounds being draws. Russell Hughes, 167 pounds, won two rounds from William McAllister, 169 pounds. McAllister, however, took the third round. Malcolm took Clema by a knock-out in the first round. Houston took Moses by one violent round, but Moses held Houston for draws in the first two rounds.

More than one hundred spectators witnessed the bouts. Steve Hokuf acted as referee. Gilbert Webster was time-keeper.

C. insignia were placed around the edge of the balcony and red and white plaques picturing military figures were placed in alternate arches around the floor.

General John J. Pershing, former commandant of the R. O. T. C. unit at Nebraska, a nd founder of Pershing Rifles, attended the ball. He arrived in Lincoln Thursday morning to spend the holidays.

Unusual Statistics on Study Shown In Complicated Report on Libraries

Books to the left of them, books to the right of them, books in front of them and still they forge onward—right into the library—the bold blonds and blushing brunettes, the riotous redheads and the handsome hot-shots. Some go for a fixed purpose—some not—a rendezvous for some—a place to study for others, a place to rest—a place to copy from encyclopedias.

In the law college library there is usually a capacity house since law students find study a great help. From the reserve shelves between two and three hundred books are used daily while about twice that number are taken daily from the reference shelves. Since most of the classes in this college are in the morning the heaviest crowds appear at that time. Usually the first four mornings of the week accommodate the most students.

With approximately ten to twelve thousand books coming in annually the main library finds it impossible to handle all of them. Consequently many of them are stored in special store-rooms in the basement of the law college, social science building, and university hall. The University of Nebraska at present owns 240,000 books, including those in the medical college at Omaha. Among these many books is an especially fine collection of books on Wilson. The Newbold collection is also outstanding. Besides the usual modern textbooks we find many old books in the library. Gilbert Doane, head of the library, displays a very old clay tablet on which is inscribed a single idea. Imagine the New York Times written in this style being delivered at your door, and you have an idea of the great advance made in publishing.

Tuesday and Thursday nights club the greatest turnout in the main library. According to the records of the social science librarian, more students in this library during the years 1925 and 1930 than do now. Monday, Tuesday and Thursday mornings still rank as high favorites for study.

Dancing continued until 12 o'clock. Permission was granted several years ago by the university authorities to hold the three major parties of the year open until 12 o'clock. Providing these parties were held on the campus, according to Miss Amanda Heppner, dean of women. These parties are the Military Ball, Junior-Senior prom, and the Inter-fraternity ball.

The grand march of the cadet officers and their dates took place immediately after the presentation of the honorary colonel. About 200 cadet officers, some from nearby schools having an R. O. T. C. unit, and some from West Point, took part in the parade. The dance immediately after the grand march was reserved for officers only.

Canopies extending over the corners at the south end of the coliseum covered chairs and davenports secured from fraternity and sorority houses on the campus. Dancing commenced at 8:30.

Form Guard of Honor.

Members of Pershing Rifles, honorary military fraternity, formed a guard of honor for the presentation of the honorary colonel and the company sponsors. Those who took part in the ceremony are: E. S. Howard, Charles Schwager, Jack Clark, James Urban and O. Webster.

Radio station KFAB broadcast the ceremony of the presentation of the honorary colonel and a portion of the dances. The broadcast lasted from 10:15 to 11.

Decorations on the stage consisted of a large painting of Gen. John J. Pershing, painted by Pat Gish, two figures representing the honorary and cadet colonels at each end of the stage, and tents, guns, and other equipment appropriate for a military camp.

The committee in charge of decorations, of which Captain John W. Croy was advisor, consisted of Major Robert H. Lay, Capt. Joseph DeKlotz, Capt. Milton Gish, Capt. Stanley Kiger, Lieuts. Frank Lin Davis, Addison E. Card, Howard Mixson, William H. Congdon, and Merrill Plimpton.

Music for the ball was secured thru the committee of Major Claude Gillespie, Lieuts Leonard Larson, Robert Raugh, and William Crabill, Capt. H. Y. Lyons was advised to the group.

Programs and invitations for the event were taken care of by Major Olin Detrick, Captain William edge and Lieutenants Richard Bell, Fred Hervert, and George Ryan. Captain R. G. Lehmann acted as advisor to the group.
