Two-Fifths Bizad Men Students, One-Third of Women Do Outside Work, Publication Survey Shows

Two-fifths of the men and more than one-third of the women in the College of Business Administration are doing outside work in addition to regular school work, according to a survey made by the staff of the Bizad News and published in the March number issued Wednesday.

The survey shows that there is very little difference in the number of credits carried by the students who work and by those who do not. Students working average 14.68 hours each while those who do not work average 15.03 hours each.

Because of limited information the students were divided into only two classes, those who work and those who do not. Further grouping was not possible, according to the report, as there was no way of ascertaining the exact number of hours spent in outside work, or of the number engaged in various occupations.

Factors tend to show that time spent in working outside varies a great deal. Some work only a few

Senning Says American Emphasis Of Material, Economic Detracts Student Interest From Politics

The American student's lack of interest in politics and affairs of government is attributed to the difference in social conditions between the United States and other countries and to the American emphasis of the material and economic, by Dr. John P. Senning, chairman of the political science department.

"I think that the difference between students of the United States and European countries in the amount of interest shown in political affairs is that in France, England or Germany students come from families that are interested in the subject of government. A student's ancestors have attended university. The father is active in politics. A foreign student has had this interest stimulated from the time that he was in the cradle. A public career is made a life vocation," according to Professor Senning.

The lack of such traditions in America is one of the basic reasons for the small interest in governmental affairs, the chief interest in America being to get ahead materially, he explained.

Complexity of Government.

The complexity of the government of the United States was also designated as a reason for the lack

Director Ireland Announces Selections Wednesday; Have Four Dances.

TO APPEAR IN OPERA

Ten students were named members of the pony chorus for "Jingle Bells." Kosmet Klub spring musical comedy, by Director Ralph Ireland, Wednesday. The chorus will make its first public appearance as the chorus for an opera given by inmates of the state penitentiary Thursday night.

"Jingle Bells," Herbert Yenne's musical comedy, requires four changes of costumes for the pony chorus. The first number is the pajama number which is followed by the Corn Cob Tassel dance. Formal attire is required for one number while another sees the chorus disguised as snowflakes.

Easterday Assists.

The male and pony choruses are working on all of their dance routines. Don Easterday is assisting Ralph Ireland with the chorus. Costumes are being sewed and a dress rehearsal for the choruses will be held in the near future.

GAUTEMALA IS TOPIC AT FORUM LUNCHEON

Schramm Illustrates Talk With Slides of Tropic Scenes, Customs.

DESCRIBES 1928 TRIP

The social, geographic and economic life of British Honduras and Guatemala was illustrated by Prof. E. F. Schramm, of the department of geology, Wednesday noon at the World Forum luncheon. Professor Schramm's address was illustrated by lantern slides which showed the tropical scenery, old churches and scenes of the more important cities in the districts which he visited.

Among the scenes was a view of the harbor at Guatemala where the buildings were recently destroyed by a hurricane. Another slide showed the great ships that anchor there to load and unload fruit.

"It was very homelike," Mr. Schramm said, "to see boxes of fruit with 'Nebraska Fruit Growers association' written on them. Great mechanical devices called 'loaders,' which looked like derricks, lifted the boxes high in the air and then lowered them into the ship. Thousands of boxes can be placed on these 'loaders' at once."

YEARBOOK PRINTING OFF TO GOOD START

1932 Cornhusker Expected From Press Early This Year; Rush Work.

Printing of the 1932 Cornhusker, according to Otis Detrick, has been started and will be rushed until the book is completed. The division pages that will separate each section of the annual are nearly completed. Three of the four colors of the designs of these pages have been run off the press and the fourth is being finished.

Each page of the book will be decorated with one of two tints, one for the fraternity and sorority section and the other for the rest of the book, Detrick explained. These tints along the borders of the pages enhance the artistic appeal of the annual and gives it a much neater appearance. Printing of this phase of the book starts today.

The Cornhusker staff has completed its work on the organization section and, as soon as press editions are available, they will be run off by the printers. The junior and senior sections are also in readiness for the printers and the fraternity and sorority house mothers' section will be finished as soon as the cuts for that panel are made by the engravers.

Besides these, the opening section and part of the snap shot section are also ready to go to press. "This gives us a good start on the new book," Detrick said, "and gives us high hopes that the book will be finished a little earlier than is usually the case."

The humor section, which will be shorter than last year's humor section, will deal with various 'gripes' and personalities about the campus in somewhat of a personal aspect, but there is to be no connected theme in it. Several pages of this part of the book have been written and, the staff believes, it will soon be ready for the press men.

Athletic Girl Is Omaha U. Student Ideal, Poll Shows

Freshmen of the Municipal University of Omaha are of a varied opinion as to their ideal woman, according to a poll taken recently in a class in rhetoric, the Omaha Bee-News reports.

A man wrote they preferred the "athletic type of woman."

The girls, however, prefer the girlish girl, slender, with long hair, sweet, cheerful and feminine.

A sample of one of the girls' dislikes given in her notation stating her choice is this: "Not one of those unattractive, thick waisted, basketball players who will insist upon wearing sport oxfords, mannish shirts and ties, walking with long strides even on the most formal occasions."

A man, in giving his reasons for choosing the athletic type says: "A girl who is athletically inclined and has a love for tennis, golf, swimming and other forms of sports, in as a rule, a girl who makes the best companion."

Both men and girls agreed the ideal man was an athlete.

BARB CLUBS ARE SEEN AS MEANS OF REALIGNMENT

Organization of the Barbs into clubs as one of the steps in the settlement of the problem of political alignment on the campus was suggested as one of the ways to clear up the lack of interest in student activities at the meeting of the realignment committee last night.

Unity Yellow Jackets and Non-Greeks Suggested As Remedies.

IS WORKING ELSEWHERE

Plan Good, Says Schramm; Abolition Parties Not Practical Now.

Organization of the Barbs into clubs as one of the steps in the settlement of the problem of political alignment on the campus was suggested as one of the ways to clear up the lack of interest in student activities at the meeting of the realignment committee last night.

Deciding that the entire abolition of political alignments among the fraternities, altho it was the true solution to the whole problem, would not work out satisfactorily at the present time, the committee agreed to consider the possibility of realignment and readjustment.

Members of the committee agreed that if the party alignments were abolished and men chosen to lead in activities strictly on their merits, the situation would be cleared up, but the thorough entrenchment of politics on the campus now would make such a task difficult.

Prof. E. F. Schramm, faculty adviser to the Interfraternity council and member of the committee, suggested that some plan be worked out whereby the Barbs would be organized into small clubs, perhapse to become fraternities eventually, and then make a realignment of factions with the Yellowjackets and Barbs opposing the Blue Shirts.

"In many of the larger universities all over the country, the fraternity is losing strength. The club organization of students has become very popular, and it is working out very successfully," Professor Schramm stated.

Nash Testifies.

Delphin Nash, president of the Barb council and member of the committee, stated that the organization of the Barbs would be a very difficult task. The fact that at the present time they do not have much to gain by any form of organization would hinder organization, Nash said.

He cited examples of the organization of Barbs on the campus now—small groups organized as boarding clubs. The spirit among the members of such a group is unified, tho they are not working for any particular objective in the field of politics, Nash declared.

Prof. E. W. Lantz, faculty adviser to the Student council and member of the committee, advanced the idea that the Barbs would have more to look forward to than the political side of the matter if they were organized.

Two Faculty Members Say Nebraska Parties Are Social Anomaly; Third Deplores Treatment of Chaperons

Nebraska's party system is a social anomaly according to two of three faculty members questioned Thursday. The third deplored the lack of courtesy shown faculty chaperons at student social events.

"Students are having more and more difficulty in securing chaperons for their parties, due to the fact that the latter are treated as intruders," says Herbert Yenne, member of the dramatics department faculty. Mr. Yenne has served as chaperone of many university parties.

"On one occasion," states Mr. Yenne, "I was asked to chaperone a dinner dance. My partner and I were not even asked to go down to dinner with the rest and it was only by attaching ourselves to a freshman that we managed to get there at all. Three people spoke to us during the whole evening, and one of these was from a distance."
