The aggregation of which Edward Beagler was a member. The two members of the Beta team met in the final round of the state championship in 1928. The decision handed down was two to one. Walter Nolte was the chairman of the debate and introduced the speakers. The time that was granted for the main speeches was six minutes and four minutes was allotted for rebuttal. The teams were composed of two men each. The affirmative stated that the purpose of military training was not to give an education but to train men for war. The assertion that military training was educational was preposterous, according to the affirmative. The substitute that was recommended by the affirmative was that students be left an alternative in choosing between military training and physical training. Such a substitute would make military training more effective, was their reasoning. Deny Evils.

The physical education system would be subject to the same fallacy, according to Mr. Brewster of the negative. In the rebuttal Mr. Beagler of the negative denied the evils of military training that the affirmative had set up. "There can be no good discipline when it is under supervision," was the argument of Don Easterday of the negative. The benefits of military training as pointed out by the negative were refuted. A plaque will be awarded the winner of the debate, which was inaugurated this year under the sponsorship of Rudolph Vogeler, of the intramural department. Delta Sigma Rho, national intercollegiate forensic society backed the intramural debate program and felt out student sentiment in regards to the proposed plan. Professor H. A. White, varsity debate coach, chose the judges for the debates. Seventeen teams were entered at the beginning of the elimination contest. Delta Sigma Lambda has debated two more debates than the Beta Theta Pi team did, as they met Kappa Sigma in a preliminary round and as the Beta's won one of their matches by forfeit.

Intramural debate will be continued next year, according to those in charge, but it will continue as a separate activity and will not be made a part of the regular intramural sports program. The winning of the debate will not count towards the total tabulation of points on the sports point system.

Ray Ramsay, alumni secretary, was toastmaster at the banquet. Leo Beck and his orchestra played during the meal and led in group singing. Speakers of the evening were Chancellor E. A. Burnett, Dean of Student Affairs T. J. Thompson, and Robert Joyce, prominent citizen of Lincoln and leader in Boy Scout work.

Chancellor Speaks. Chancellor Burnett spoke on the enjoyment and feeling of fellowship and accomplishment to be gained from such meetings. "We like to get together often for such meetings just to see what has been accomplished by fraternity men on the campus."

"We look with pride upon the records made by these men when they leave college," the chancellor continued. "They take positions of leadership in their respective homes and are recognized everywhere."

Dean Thompson congratulated the fraternities upon the record they had made in withstanding the present economic depression. "Both fraternities and sororities have done remarkably well, and they are to be commended," he stated. He urged the fraternities to give their continuous support to the interfraternity council for its work in the future in order to contribute to their own well being and to the good of the university.

Robert Joyce advised care and judgment in the managing of fraternities. "At the present time you are only custodians of the fraternity, and upon your actions and deeds rests the standing of the fraternity," he declared. He advised the men to continue to work and to take advantage of the great future offered them in the state.

COACH SCHULTE has received a letter from a friend at Humboldt relating the good work that Owen Rist, shot putter on the Nebraska team last season, is accomplishing. Rist, who is not in school this year, must be practicing diligently as the Humboldt informant writes that he pushed the shot out 45 feet, 10 inches in an exhibition at the Little Ten conference meet last Friday. As a member of Schulte's track team last year, the Humboldt boy was handicapped by immaturity. Although he weighs six feet, six inches and weighs over 200 pounds, Rist is only nineteen. He hopes to be back in school next year. Schulte hopes he will too, as someone will be needed to replace Hugh Rhea.

Four members of the Indiana track team, enroute to the Drake relays last Friday were injured in an accident which occurred about an hour out of Bloomington. Bruised and badly scratched but otherwise unharmed, the Hoosier tracksters looked about at Des Moines for someone to help them get in shape for the meet. They were told that "Doc" McLean, the Nebraska trainer, was the man to help them solve their troubles, so "Doc" was called in. He did his work so well that one of the men, a broad jumper, placed high in his event, and the distance men that made up the remainder of the injured list were able to win the four mile relay the next day. Brocksmith was in another car. It seems that the Indiana party which included Coach E. C. Hayes, was forced to take to the ditch when a car endeavored to pass them in the face of an oncoming third machine. Coach Hayes was rendered unconscious as a result of the crash, and was driven back to Bloomington by one of his trackmen.
