ECONOMISTS PETITION LOWER TARIFF DUTIES

Ask Hoover to Use Power in Counteracting Smoot, Hawley Rates.

(CNS).—Leading economists in colleges and universities throughout the country this week petitioned President Hoover to reduce what were described as "excessive tariff duties" established by the Hawley-Smoot act.

The petition carried 180 signatures, all of which were among those affixed to the original protest of 1,028 economists to the signing of the Hawley-Smoot bill in 1930.

The new protest again condemns the Hawley-Smoot tariff, declaring that it has caused foreign nations to enact retaliatory tariffs directly aimed at the American producer.

The presidential office is vested with the power, thru negotiation and conference (stated the petition), to remove unfair and discriminatory trade barriers and to promote the reduction of excess tariff duties by diplomatic action.

Signers of the petition represented sixty-seven colleges and universities, according to Professor James C. Bonbright of Columbia university.
