Luncheons and Dinners at Various Fraternity and Sorority Houses Are Being Arranged in Addition to University Program.

In addition to the Dads Day program being planned by the university, many Greek organizations are making arrangements to honor their fathers with luncheons and dinners scheduled for November 12. Earliest Dad's Day Luncheons Were Held As Get Togethers Under Trees

Dads Day was founded, according to Dr. George E. Condra, to bring students and their parents in closer relationship and to make the latter better acquainted with the university, its functions, and its administration.

"At first we used to go out and have a little lunch under the trees somewhere and have a general good time. We always made the date on the same day as a football game. Later we made the affair for mothers and fathers both, so that now we have all four family groups meeting—mothers and daughters, sons and fathers."

"As a day, when parents and their sons and daughters can meet and talk over each others problems, Dads Day is filling an important place in university traditions," Dr. Condra continued. "It gives them both the opportunity to express the ideals of relationship between the father and son—the mother and daughter. Both have their problems and each finds a sympathetic listener in the other.

Hold Initiations. "Last year," he continued, "we initiated parents and their sons and daughters into Delta Alpha Delta and Mu Alpha. The sons and daughters took the initiation into D. A. D. with a firm handclasp and the mothers and daughters did the same when initiated into M. A.

"When they went out of the initiation room, you could detect a new spirit of relationship. The fathers and sons were like a pair of boys, while the mothers and daughters acted like a pair of girlhood friends. The sons and daughters seemed to have newly discovered their parents, while the parents found new sons and daughters.

"That's what Dads Day stands for," he concluded. "The revival of interest in the family group, and the emphasis of closer relationship between parents and their sons and daughters in school."

Regent and Mrs. Fred A. Marsh of Archer, Regent and Mrs. Marion A. Shaw of David City, Regent and Mrs. Earl Cline of Lincoln, Regent and Mrs. Arthur C. Stokes of Omaha, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray E. Ramsay.

In the stadium a special section of seats will be reserved for dads and their sons and daughters and any other members of the family who can come. Students whose tickets are reserved in the student section may trade in these tickets for tickets in the dads' section, according to John K. Silleck, director of student athletics.

Another special box in the stadium will be reserved especially for fathers of Husker football players. It is planned to have each father of a varsity man wear a large number corresponding to the number on his son's jersey.

Plan Many Affairs.

Dads Day activities will continue in the evening as a large number of fraternities and sororities have indicated the expectation of having special smokers and dinners in honor of dads of members of each group. Numerous house parties, and a Dad's Day All University party, sponsored by the Barb council, are scheduled for the evening to which dads will be specially invited.

Tickets for the Dads' Day luncheon went on sale Wednesday, a large number being checked out to Interfraternity council representatives. Members of the Interclub council and Barb council will be given tickets to sell this week, and Panhellenic council representatives will receive tickets at their next meeting Monday, Nov. 7. Churches which observe All Church day recognize the presence of students in their congregations by choosing a sermon subject of special importance to university people. Music for the services is also chosen with the students in mind.

All University Church day was an outgrowth of the Council of Religious Welfare, an organization made up of a committee of faculty members working in co-operation with a group of denominational student pastors and the secretaries of the university Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. With the aid of students, the council finds it possible to carry the interests of the city's churches to the young men and women of the university.

Self Preservation Is Necessary!

We are told that even the wolf will kill its own mate if its own life is endangered. Alaskan dogs have been known to fight until death in order to secure the food which might be gained from the carcass of its enemy. Even the ants have their little fights. If you don't believe this, consult the transcendentalist Thoreau. He has given literature a beautiful description of the "battle of the ants."

Man also finds that self preservation is often necessary. Surely you must remember that stirring and dramatic scene in "All Quiet on the Western Front" when the German soldier and the French soldier find themselves face to face in a muddy shell hole in the center of a war ridden field. They didn't flip a coin to see which was to die. No, they fought it out. Each knew that one was to live. Each knew that one was to die.

Campus publications find that self preservation is also necessary this year. None need die if the right support is given to them. Can you imagine a university the size of Nebraska's and with an equal amount of prestige, without any campus publications whatever? We admit that it is not a pleasant thought, but the truth is often what hurts the most.

Mr. Local Merchant is the good fellow who, for the most part, makes these enjoyable publications possible. His advertising dollar goes to pay the many bills which these student businesses may contract. And when he spends his money for advertising, he expects results. It's up to every last one of us, who desires the continuation of campus publications, to see that the advertiser gets his much desired results.

If you want a good buyers' guide, just ask at any of the publication offices. They will be only too glad to help the man who helps them. It's a fight to the finish. Enlist now in this gigantic drive for better results from advertising—which will mean better campus publications and better values to you.
