SALES OF YEARBOOKS BETTER OLD RECORDS

Campaign Tops Results of Opening Drive Last Year.

More Cornhuskers have been sold during the first days of the sale than had been sold during the same period in the opening sales campaign last year, it was revealed Monday evening, when a checkup of all sales had been made.

If 1,000 books are sold the ultimate price will be $3.95 on cash payment plan and $4.20 on installments, which plan would be carried out by a refund when the books are obtained next spring.

"The record low cash price of $4.25 is already the lowest in the Big Six and a possible refund makes the greatest proposition ever offered in the purchasing of a year book," Business Manager Charles Skade stated.

Sales competition has been keen as an outgrowth of the prize of $25 worth of merchandise offered by Magee's to the member of the sales staff selling the highest number of annuals during the contest. Tassels, Corn Cobs and staff members are in charge of the campaign.

Every individual selling Cornhuskers will be eligible for the prize excepting the assistant business managers and the managing editors of the annual's regular staff.

Interest is also growing in the Cornhusker coed contest, according to Skade. Any girl on the campus is eligible for one of these positions and anyone purchasing a Cornhusker may vote.

With only four days to go the business manager urged that students take advantage of possible savings by ordering now before the sale closes Friday, Nov. 11.
