ENROLLMENT IN FARM COURSE IS FIFTY-SIX

Four Months Training Given By College Attracts Nebraska Boys.

By Tuesday evening, enrollment in the farm operators' course had reached fifty-six, according to H. K. Douthit, director of short courses at the college of agriculture. This four month course in practical farm management was designed to meet the need of farm boys finding it impossible to attend the regular school sessions of the university.

The enrollment this year includes boys from all parts of Nebraska, all of whom are farm boys and most all are graduates from high schools. Eighteen winners of the Union Pacific railroad scholarships have come to take advantage of these short courses. Mr. Douthit stated that in spite of the fact that the enrollment has increased over what it was the first day, it still shows a slight decrease from previous years.

Battle-Scarred Bell, Relic of Many Football and Fraternity Struggles, Is Again at Stake Thursday

Possession of the Missouri-Nebraska bell, battle scarred relic of football and fraternity struggles, will again be at stake when Nebraska meets Missouri in the final game of the Big Six conference season in Memorial stadium Thursday afternoon.

Since 1928 when the bell tradition was instituted in connection with the annual Tiger-Husker game, the battered tocsin has been in possession of Nebraska. Nebraska took the bell that year after a 24 to 0 victory at Lincoln, holding it the next two years when the schools played tie games, 7 to 7, at Columbia in 1929 and 0 to 0 here in 1930. Last year the ball was carried to Columbia and back home again when Nebraska won 10 to 7.

Thursday afternoon the bell will be brought from its exhibition place in the N. club rooms to the stadium, carried by four Corn Cobs marching ahead of the band. After carrying it once around the track, they will bring it to the middle of the field where members of Innocents Society, who carry on the traditions for Nebraska, will turn it over to representatives of the Missouri Student council who will take it to the Missouri side of the stadium for the first half.

At half time the bell will be again brought to the center of the field and then carried to Nebraska's side of the stadium for the second half. Representatives of the winning school will take possession of the victory symbol after the game.

Until 1927 the bell was joint property of Delta Tau Delta and Phi Delta Theta fraternity. From the lore surrounding its early history, the story generally accepted is that the bell was secured in a mysterious manner from a colored church in Seward some thirty years ago by members of the two fraternities who at that time lived in the same rooming house.

The token was kept in the rooming house until the two fraternities separated and took up separate residences. Its history from that time until 1927 is the story of periodic fights for its possession, first one group and then the other succeeding in "hijacking" the bell.

This rivalry reached a climax in 1927 when the struggle for its possession resulted in an open fight in a downtown hotel. A peace conference was called and the proposal that the bell be turned over to the Innocents society as a perpetual emblem of Missouri-Nebraska gridiron rivalry was accepted.

The Greek insignia of the two groups on opposite sides of the bell were replaced by the letter "N" and "M" and the bell mounted on a walnut stand. The following year the custom of giving it to the winning school following the annual game each year was begun.

To date there are five score plates embedded in the stand at the base of the bell, including the record of the Missouri 7 to 6 victory in 1927, although the tradition did not formally begin until in 1928.

What story of the bell's fate the next plate will bear awaits the outcome of tomorrow's game.

Another outstanding grid hero was Finkle, who by lying on the ground out of reach of the hard charging, fighting Nebraskan eleven, managed to come out of the game without a single scratch.
