

Nebraskan Sports Editor Picks Big Six Teams

CHAMPION HUSKERS RECEIVE SIX PLACES ON FIRST SELECTION

Ely, Sauer, Hokuf, Penny,
Mathis, Hulbert Win
Positions.

BY JOE MILLER.

To select twenty-two players and label them as standing in the conference requires no little courage. Regardless of how carefully the merits of the men are weighed, errors are bound to occur in comparing the ability of the various gridsters. These selections will be open to criticism, but after all this is merely an expression of personal opinion. But here they are, an all Big Six first team and a second eleven.

Nebraska, 1932 champions of the Big Six conference wins six places on the first team. On the face of it, the large number of posts allotted to the Huskers reveals partiality. However, when it is considered that the Cornhuskers possess the strongest line in the conference, and the best all around backfield the bias is not so apparent. Not one touchdown has been scored thru the Nebraska line this season.

At the end positions are placed Lee Penney and Steve Hokuf of Nebraska. A scanning of conference wingmen fail to show a pair of ends who have measured up to these two Huskers in all around ability. Hokuf punts and passes. He is a good pass receiver and is stout defensively. Penney is the keenly aggressive type of end who is at his best when his opponents have the ball. Gains around Penney's right end job are at a premium.

Hulbert and Gill.

Percy Gill, 210 pound Missouri lineman deserves right tackle honors. He is fast, does the kicking for Missouri and backs up the line on defense. At left tackle, Corwin Hulbert, Nebraska, gets the nod. Faster than Gill, Hulbert's speciality is moving down under punts and covering them deep in enemy territory. He charges aggressively and handles his feet well.

A Kansas boy by the name of George Atkeson is probably the best guard in the Big Six. Atkeson weighs 188 pounds and is a senior. His coach, Ad Lindsey considers Atkeson the outstanding Jayhawk lineman. Two Oklahoma guards, Bashara and Whittington fight it out with Debus and Bishop of Nebraska for the remaining guard spots. These boys are practically on a par, with Ellis Bashara receiving the left guard nomination because of his fine play in the Nebraska game. His work, however, has been very consistent all season.

Lawrence Ely, Scarlet moleskiner draws the center position after a hard fight with Paul Young, Oklahoma and Lloyd Michael, Kansas State. Ely's sensational defensive ability and unusual talent for diagnosing opposing plays gives him the edge. Young is placed on the second team, just ahead of Michael.

Schaake at Quarter.

With Elmer Schaake of Kansas at quarterback; Chris Mathis, Nebraska, at left half; Dougal Russell, Kansas State at right half, and George Sauer at fullback, the conference boasts the best backfield in some years. Schaake played a dandy game against the Huskers but did not cut loose until the Kansas State tilt when he stole the show from Russell and Graham.

Mathis and Russell are as an elusive duo of ball carriers as can be found in college football. Both are fast and are almost sure bets for yardage when it is needed. Russell is the most accurate kicker in the Big Six. George Sauer is re-named at fullback. He hits harder than any back in the conference. Sauer is just as effective at sweeping the ends as he is on line plunges. His passing and punting have been an essential part of Coach Bible's attack.

On the second conference team, Cherry of Oklahoma and Schiele of Missouri are given the end positions; O'Brien, Nebraska, and Mehringer of Kansas, tackles; Debus, Nebraska and Whittington, Oklahoma, guards; Young, Oklahoma, center; Masterson, Nebraska, quarterback; Grefe, Iowa State and Dunlap, Oklahoma, halfbacks and Graham, Kansas State, fullback.
