LOW COST BEAUTY LEADS INSTRUCTOR TO INVESTIGATION

Miss Bess Steele Shows Collection Culled From Dime Store.

Miss Bess Steele of the home economics department has undertaken as a depression measure, the investigation of the low cost of beauty.

"Beauty doesn't depend on money," says Miss Steele, and to prove it, she has made a collection of remarkably beautiful things, considering their low cost. Most of them, she proudly admits, came from the dime store.

This collection of inexpensive and beautiful things was not made in a day. Miss Steele spent most of the past semester gathering her articles. They were exhibited for the first time at organized agriculture, where a round table discussion was held on "Low Cost Beauty."

The question of greatest interest was "What can be done to bring beauty into the home without great expense?" Miss Steele's collection answers that question in part. The rest of the answer is to eliminate the things that clutter, and to try for harmony and unity of line in arrangement.

Says Beauty Cheers.

"We should be more sensitive to our surroundings," says Miss Steele. "Beauty cheers and ugliness offends. One can love and have beautiful things without regard to cost, and whoever loves the beautiful will acquire it."

Pictures, miniatures, dishes, luncheon sets, book ends, lampshades, vases, boxes, and candleholders are some of the beautiful things from the dime store. These are being exhibited for the second time, arranged in units, or groups for the library table, mantelpiece, or table. A particularly fine piece in one of the sets for a table was an amber colored hob nail glass from the dime store. An old kerosene lamp had been dressed up in a new shade and was a part of a library unit which contained book ends of black metal and a grooved metal bowl for flowers.

Greeks Ask Time Extension To Include First Week New Semester.

"The fraternity and sorority sections of the Cornhusker will probably be left open until the first week of the second semester," according to Ralph Spencer, editor of the yearbook, "because many of the fraternity and sorority presidents have requested that the time be extended."

Nearly Complete.

The final decision about closing the fraternity and sorority sections depends upon the result of a visit from a representative of the engraving company in the near future. At the present time these sections of the book are about 95 percent complete.

Many fraternity and sorority presidents have asked that the sections be left open until the second semester so that the names and pictures of the second semester pledges could be included in the fraternity group.

Announcement of the coming address before the Student Forum meeting, Wednesday, Jan. 23, by Kirby Page, editor of "World Tomorrow," and well known pacifist recalls Mr. Page's appearance at Nebraska two years ago, when, at the close of a similar luncheon talk he engaged in an impromptu pacifist militarist with Col. W. H. Oury, commandant of the Nebraska R. O. T. C.

Mr. Page answered to inquiry that he favored the abolition of military training in the universities for two reasons, the first was that he opposed all the various parts and instruments of war and that if war agencies were needed that the university was the worst place for them. He went further to encourage students to send petitions to congress expressing their views on various subjects, for in his opinion it would have effect.

A new policy and conception in regard to a nation's obligation to defend the lives and property of its

Men Want Housework Jobs at Wisconsin U.

A field commonly supposed to be restricted to the "weaker sex" has been invaded by some 200 men students at the University of Wisconsin. Claiming to know just as much about house work as coeds, they have applied to the student employment bureau for aid in obtaining work in Madison homes. Only 100 coeds have applied for home work jobs, this year being outnumbered by the men for the first time in the seven-year history of the bureau for this kind of work.

BEAVEN, ADDRESSING CONVOCAION, LISTS PROBLEMS OF YOUTH

Speaker Urges Students to Assume Their Political Responsibility.

"Youth should be more individualistic, 'hard headed,' and spend more time with deep thinking on public affairs." Such is the opinion of Dr. Albert W. Beaven of Colgate seminary as expressed in an address before a University of Nebraska convocation Tuesday morning.

Doctor Beaven discussed in detail democratic and aristocratic governments, their faults and merits.

Altho there is a tendency among the youth of today to take democracy in America for granted, and altho the youth of the world blackguards American democracy freely, these same young people would be willing to come over to America if they were presented the opportunity, he declared.

Sense of Pride.

"At the same time the average student in America today feels a certain sense of pride and confidence in the country, even tho he does not personally concern himself with the perpetuation of democratic ideals and traditions."

Remarking on the frequently heard statement that this country needs a dictator, Beaven said, "we may assure ourselves that we will not have one, for such a policy would not fit into our plan of government which has been built upon years of democratic tradition."

The speaker outlined four fundamentals of democratic government.
