MORTAR BOARDS, INNOCENTS REPLY TO QUESTIONNAIRE

Awgwan Plans Personality Contest to Be Feature in February Edition.

Members of the Innocents society, Mortar Board members and other prominent persons about the campus are judging a personality contest sponsored by the Awgwan. Results of this questionnaire will be a main feature in the February edition of the humor publication.

Details of the contest are unusual in that any person is eligible and no one will have any clues as to the outcome. Slips of paper have been given to women on which the following characteristics are printed; hair, eyes, voice, intellect, o-ooo, physique and personality. Opposite these will be written names of men especially typifying the traits.

On the questionnaires given to men the following traits were suggested: figure, face, hair, voice, legs, personality, mm-m! and intellect. Personality characteristics of both men and women will be determined by information gleaned from the results of the contest.

Lynn Leonard, Alpha Sigma Phi and managing editor of the Daily Nebraskan, laughed when asked what he thought of the idea but replied that "It will create a lot of interest." Loela Schill, Alpha Xi Delta, expressed her doubts as to the humor of the contest by saying that some students might be offended by the answers given.

NEBRASKA CONTESTS DRAKE UNIVERSITY IN NO DECISION DEBATE

Huskers Take Affirmative Side of Reparations Proposition.

Nebraska met Drake University in a radio debate Tuesday afternoon on the proposition Resolved: That the intergovernmental World War debts and reparations should be cancelled. There was no decision but the listeners were requested to send in their comments.

Nebraska on the affirmative argued that it is impossible for debtor nations to pay the intergovernmental war debts and reparations in gold as the United States has insisted; and that the United States should accept a part of the financial burden of the war in consideration of some of the services of the allies.

Chaos Would Result.

Drake contended that chaos would result from the cancellation of such a huge sum as the nine billion dollars of war debts and that serious troubles would arise in regard to the fifteen billion dollars that is owed to private individuals in the United States.

The speakers for Nebraska were H. Vincent Broady and Howard L. Holtzendorff. Drake was represented by Murray Nelson and Ovid Fitzgerald. The debate was broadcast over station KFOR.

Although we have been shivering at sub-zero temperatures our "neighbors" on the Atlantic coast have been enjoying warm weather. Rain has fallen in the Atlantic states and along the Gulf coast, while the Lake region, the Ohio valley, and the lower Mississippi valley as far as northern Louisiana are blanketed with snow. Among the bills before the state legislature that have connection with the university are fourteen proposals providing for a simplification of the state's code of criminal procedure. Inspiration for this reform comes from Prof. Lester B. Orfield at the college of law.

Professor Orfield, who is an instructor of crimes and equity in the college, stated that he had been working on the project for four years. The bills are part of a model code prepared by the American Law Institute, an organization of lawyers, judges and law professors.

"I am not offering any reforms as to appointments or personnel since I have worked out no definite program for them," the professor declared, "but I am confining the reform to criminal procedure because I consider it important and have worked out a definite program for it."

Meets With Committee.

Orfield will be present at a meeting of the judiciary committee of the house to explain the fourteen bills, all of which were introduced at his suggestion.
