HONORARY FRATERNITY TO SPONSOR TOURNEY

Delta Sigma Rho Announces Sixteen Groups Must Enter Teams.

Announcement was made Monday afternoon by Earl Fishbaugh that the Nebraska chapter of Delta Sigma Rho, national honorary debate and oratorical fraternity, will again sponsor an interfraternity debate tourney this spring. Plans call for the first debate to be held on April 16.

If the competition is to be held at least sixteen teams must sign up by Friday, March 31, at 5 o'clock at the athletic office in the coliseum. One team is to represent each house, and is to be prepared to debate either the affirmative or negative of the question. As yet the topic has not been selected.

Last spring the Delta Sigma Lambda team won the final debate from Beta Theta Pi to annex the title. Seventeen teams competed last year and the affirmative teams held debates at their houses.

Provided sixteen teams can be secured, appropriate plaques will be awarded the teams winning first, second, and third places.

The principals in the cast, as announced in Sunday's Daily Nebraskan, are Art Bailey, taking the role of Lynn McAllister, female lead. Lynn is the owner of the ranch. Playing opposite Bailey, Duncan Sowles will take the part of Spud Warren, veteran dude rancher and manager of the Bar-O ranch.

RELIGIOUS WELFARE GROUP TO SPONSOR WEEK OF EMPHASIS

Foster, Hardwick, Skurlock And Stamm Listed as Speakers.

In an attempt to make a wide appeal to the student body, the Religious Welfare Council of the university is sponsoring a Religious Emphasis Week starting March 31 and ending April 4, featuring several prominent speakers who will be visiting on the campus at that time, and employing the services of a number of faculty members for use in personal student interviews.

Dr. Allyn K. Foster, James Hardwick, Bishop John S. Stamm, and Miss Stella Skurlock, are the four speakers who will participate in the various programs which have been arranged.

Dr. Foster, who is the Baptist student traveling secretary, has made himself widely known because of his specialization on the question of the reconciliation of scientific facts and religious beliefs. "If both science and religion deal with real experience, there must be some point at which they are essentially the same," he says in a recent book entitled "The New Dimensions of Religion." If we can find that point, we shall be far on our way to a scientific statement of religion, and the adventure of religion like the adventure of science will become a challenging search for the resources of the universe." Dr. Foster is expected to deal with this question in some of his addresses here.

Mr. Hardwick, a Y. M. C. A. student director of the national staff, is a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute where he was captain of the football team. "I think he

WOULD ELIMINATE RIDER FROM BILL

Representatives Present Pleas Against Crippling Education; Effort Will Be Made to Substitute Bryan Budget for One of Committee.

Overwhelmingly in favor of its own finance committee report rather than Governor Bryan's budget allowance, the house of representatives yesterday defeated a motion to raise the amount to that recommended by the governor. The vote was 18 to 64.

An effort to eliminate the rider from the finance committee bill, which would make the university's withdrawal from membership in the North Central Association of Colleges mandatory, was also defeated. The vote on the motion to cut the rider from the bill was 35 to 40.

Members of the house continued to follow the recommendations of the committee all along the line. Several representatives, however, presented strong pleas against crippling education. An effort will be made, according to authentic reports, to substitute Bryan's budget for the whole committee report, and if the move fails, the fight will be taken to the senate.

Rep. W. H. Meier, Lincoln democrat, pointing out the fact that the university is the only state educational institution voluntarily taking salary cuts, proposed an amendment to increase the general appropriation from $2,568,200 to $2,990,000. He wanted the governor's budget taken in preference to the committee's recommendations.
