FORTY REPORT FOR BASKETBALL DRILL

Two Men Are Lost From Varsity Ranks by Graduation.

With a squad of about forty men reporting for drill, spring basketball practice is progressing rapidly, and prospects for a good team to represent Nebraska next winter appear rosier than they have for several years.

Only two men graduated from the first squad ranks as the 1932-33 season ended, Steve Hokuf and Walt Henrion finishing their collegiate competition. However these two men were the class of the squad, and the filling of the two vacancies is causing Coach Browne a good deal of worry.

Cagers, who competed for Nebraska last winter, and are due to return next year for further competition are Ken Lunney, Hub Boswell, George Wahlquist, and Bud Parsons, forwards; Leland Copple, center; Paul Mason, Bob Belka, and George Sauer, guards. Madison Letts, who played during the season of 1931-32 will also return for some more play next winter.

Coach Browne has a number of last year's freshman players, who he figures will give the veterans plenty to think about in the scramble for team positions. Virgil Yelkin, Dwight Loder, Everett Martin, Dwight Scherer, Everett Munn, John Parilek and Don North are a few of the outstanding yearling performers who will be bidding for berths on the squad.

CONFERENCE CATCHES

BY BURT MARVIN.

Archery is becoming a popular sport among some of the students on the Nebraska campus, those students in the practical arts course under the direction of Professor Easton, having erected a number of targets recently. The archery range is located about a mile straight east of Belmont, and the targets are set up against the Salt creek dirt mounds, which have been piled up in dredging operations. Besides merely shooting at the targets for accuracy, the followers of this rapidly popularizing pastime play archery golf, a game which is gaining in popularity and adherents.

When one looks down the list of sports now being engaged in he can see that there is entertainment to suit every taste. Some of the sports, and so-called sports, which blossom out in full regalia each spring when the weather becomes suitable for outdoor activity have lasted thru the ages, for instance, track. The ancient Greeks used to besport themselves by holding meets, but they must not have watched their training diets as well as do the athletes of today, for the fellow who ran the first marathon flopped down and died at the finish.

Milani and Atalanta ran a fast race for the old Greeks, but Milani did something which would certainly be unethical in modern racing; he threw apples. The runners don't throw the apples now; the crowd does, at least at the track meets and football games here at Nebraska.

Sports enthusiasts say quite often that competitors in track and field are the only ones who keep right on putting up better performances than their predecessors. World records are constantly falling in track and field competition, but it seems there should be a limit reached some day.

The only Nebraska man who holds a world record is Roland Locke, who set up a 220-yard dash mark in 1926. This greatest sprinter of them all, sped over the furlong in 20.5 seconds in the Missouri dual meet of that year. In the 1926 Missouri Valley conference track and field meet, he hung up the time of 20.6, and in the 880-yard relay covered the distance in nineteen seconds, running as anchor man. Of course it must be kept in mind that he had a running start, and that he had Grady of Kansas to beat the Jayhawker dash-man being a great sprinter, and also having a fifteen yard lead when Locke finally got the baton. Locke beat him by about the same distance. Sweet memories for both Locke and the fans!

Interest in track here at Nebraska seems to have died down a bit of late. There are not as many men reporting consistently for practice each evening. As a result the team isn't quite as well balanced as it has been as a rule in the past. But there is no reason for howling to the high heavens as yet, for the squad this winter certainly proved its quality in indoor competition. But it was a bit disappointing to see the "dark horse" Oklahomans tie the Schultermen 33 to 33 for the conference championship, after the Huskers had been talked up as virtual cinches to win. But it isn't really good for any league to have one team talked up as a certain winner, for the interest soon dies if the team is what it is talked up to be. When the baseball leaders see that one team in a big league race is getting too strong to make things interesting, a few trades are arranged so that things are evened up.
