AWGWAN APPEARING TODAY WILL SATISFY ALL MALE CURIOSITY

Advance Reviews Indicate Campus Stands to Be Crowded.

Morbid male curiosity will be satisfied—completely—when the April Awgwan, written and produced by an all woman staff and headed by Rosalie Lamme, goes on sale this morning.

Advance reviews of the magazine indicate that campus stands will be crowded as men thumb thru pages containing a "man of the year" selection, the "best dressed men," and gobs of gore from the feminine angle. In addition to the Nebraska sartorial king, who was chosen by the sorority women, the magazine will contain a page of "men you ought to know," caricatures of prominent campus males.

Men's fashions, a page by Katherine Howard will be one of the features of the comic, as will the standings of fraternities in the most recently compiled fraternity pin market. A blind date chart will parody the recent selection of dateable women, and several stories will top off the issue.

The story titles include "Hodge-Podge," by Lucille Hunter, and "Fraternity Fables."

DR. TRAVIS EXPLAINS POSSIBLE CAUSES OF STUTTERING IN TALK

Because Two Halves of Brain Do Not Work To- gether Is Explanation.

How measurement of the tiny nerve impulses sent from the nerve centers to the muscles has indicated that stuttering may be due to failure of the two halves of the brain to act together was told by Dr. L. E. Travis, University of Iowa psychologist, at an open meeting of Psi Chi, honorary psychological society, in social sciences hall auditorium at the University of Nebraska Thursday evening.

Dr. Travis, director of the speech clinic at Iowa, described the studies of speech disorder, including stuttering, which he is now making by means of the "neuro-physiological approach to psychological problems."

Subjects of the experiments are the motor impulses or "action currents"—small electrical currents—which pass along the nerves from the nerve centers to the muscles and cause movements of the body. These minute electrical impulses are measured by means of a galvanometer.

College Mourns Loss Of Crescent De Mar

Crescent DeMar is dead. This is a day of mourning on the college of agriculture campus. Faculty members and students alike are grieving over the loss.

But Crescent DeMar is not a fair woman student. She is a sorrel Belgian mare, known to more people probably than the best dressed man on the campus or the president of an honorary organization.

One daughter and one granddaughter are left in the immediate family to mourn the death. No other relatives are known to be living in Nebraska. Crescent DeMar was eight years old. No flowers will be accepted.

Visitors to the campus, including those uptown students who take Ag journalism, can remember this beautiful mare as one of a team used on the two-horse lawn mower, wagons and other vehicles. She had always been a favorite in Farmer's fair parades and in Feeder's day activities as well.

An extensive program has been completed by the executive board, and will be headlined by Leo Beck and his orchestra which will play for a free dance in the park pavilion.

The annual baseball game between the faculty members of the college and the students will be played during the afternoon, in addition to other forms of recreation.
