CAMPUS ACTIVITIES REACH HIGH POINT ON IVY DAY MAY 4

Full Plans Are Released By Gertrude Clark of Mortar Boards.

Campus activities reached the high-point of the year Thursday, May 3, when Nebraska holds its traditional Ivy Day ceremonies, plans for which were released Monday by Gertrude Clark, member of Mortar Board society which sponsors the annual affair.

All events will take place on the lawn between the Administration building and U Hall barring inclement weather in which case the Coliseum will be used.

A sixty-piece band under the direction of Billy Quick will open the day's program at 8:45 a. m. with a fifteen minute concert. The Interfraternity sing sponsored by Kosmet Klub, will follow at 9 o'clock. Fraternities will each sing two songs and will sing in alphabetical order. Twelve groups have entered the sing to date, with more expected before the deadline Tuesday.

Ivy Day Oration.

At 10:15 the Ivy Day orator will deliver his address which will cover fifteen minutes. Ralph Rodgers of Lincoln is this year's speaker, elected by the law college. Custom of previous years has been changed, as this event has heretofore been held in the afternoon.

Following the oration, the winners of the contest will be announced.

PLANS FOR PHARMACY NIGHT ARE COMPLETED

Annual Picnic to Be Held Friday Afternoon in Pioneers Park.

Plans for the eleventh annual Pharmacy night exhibit, which is to be held Thursday, May 4, have been completed according to Prof. J. B. Burt, faculty member in charge of the display.

A feature of the annual display will be a government licensed still which was used the past summer in distilling oil from certain mint plants in the western part of the state. Thursday night the plant will be in operation and will demonstrate the steam distillation of volatile oil.

Other faculty members in charge of the various displays are Prof. F. S. Bukey of the Pharmacy college; Miss Mary Langenin, resident pharmacist and instructor in the college; and C. L. Wibbe, professor of physiology.

The annual College of Pharmacy picnic has been scheduled for Friday, May 5, and is to be held in Pioneer park, according to Nina Goldstein, committee member in charge of picnic arrangements. Plans are also being made to hold the yearly banquet in the Hotel Cornhusker.

Device Enables Transmission of Music Thru Ether on Light Waves

Apparatus Has Been Used As Means of Traffic Control.

The ethereal passage of music on the wings of song may be silenced by the passage of the passerby's hand through a beam of light that finds its source in the common spotlight of an automobile.

Such is the remarkable feat of electrical wizardry perfected by B. C. Burden, transmission engineer of the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph company, in connection with the display heralding the approach of the coming Engineer's Night, which will be held on the university campus Thursday.

Five Awards Will Be Made To Winners in Amateur Division.

Prizes to be awarded winners in the photographic contest being held in connection with Farmer's Fair were announced today by Victor Rediger, member of the senior fair board at the agricultural college. Entries in the event have been unusually strong.

Five prizes are being awarded the winners in the amateur division. Lincoln firms are donating all articles. A photo flash reflector and six bulbs go to the first place winner with the Nephro laboratories as donors. The McDonald Photo shop is offering a print of the state capitol to the second prize winner, an etchcraft enlargement goes to the third place by Van Doran's Photo shop. The same concern is offering an etchcraft enlargement to the fourth place winner while a snapshot album goes to fifth place by Eastman Kodak Company.

In the advanced group of the contest, four major prizes are offered. Townsend's are giving three 5x7 portraits to the grand winner. The Nephro laboratories are giving a photo flood reflector and three bulbs to the second place winner. To the person getting third prize goes a print of the state capitol by McDonald. The Eastman Kodak company is giving an American photographic annual to the fourth place winner.

Miss Besse Steele, Miss Ada Tucker and Dwight Kirsch are judging the Photographic contest. They will judge the entries late this week and outstanding snapshots will be displayed Saturday at Farmer's Fair on the agricultural college campus.

POLITICAL CLOUDS HOVER OVER CAMPUS AS ELECTION NEARS

Factions Naming Prospects With Filing Deadline Set for Friday.

The murky clouds of political verbiage again darken the atmosphere as campus factions complete their slates for the approaching spring election.

With the filing deadline set for next Friday, leaders of both factions have been busily engaged in lining up their prospective choices who, if elected, will carry on the official business of the student body for another year.

Beliefs expressed yesterday indicate that the political lineup on the campus will remain unchanged from last fall, when the Yellow Jacket-Barb coalition wrested the class offices of the junior and senior classes, from the long reign of the Blue Shirts.

Both Factions Meet.

While it is generally known that both factions have met and discussed the coming election during the past few weeks, no definite action has been taken by either with regard to the ticket which they will file this Friday.

Present indications point to the fact that the coming contest will prove to be a much closer contest than last spring, when the Yellow Jacket-Barb faction swept into the majority of the campus political plums, their candidates for office.

Following the ruling set last fall by the student council the elections will be supervised by members of that body. The plan as used at that time proved to be successful and from all indications will be used again.

Control of Council.

The prize of the spring election lies in the direction of faction control of the student council. Filings for the student governing board include: Four seniors at large; four from the College of Arts and Science; four from Teachers College; two from Engineering; two from Business Administration; two from Fine Arts; two from Agriculture, and one each from Dental, Graduate, Pharmacy, and Law Colleges.

Student representation on the publication board includes one representative from the senior, junior, and sophomore classes.

In the heated and spirited election last spring the Yellow Jacket-Barb faction managed to gain seven of the student council seats, in addition to winning two of the three publications board seats. The election was especially significant in view of the fact that for three years the Blue Shirts had monopolized campus elections.

As to this year's outcome of the election, judging from the interest displayed by both parties, voting should be the heaviest cast in some time.

400 MEN EXPECTED TO ATTEND BANQUET

Frankforter Will Speak to Fraternity Members at Annual Affair.

About four hundred men are expected to attend the annual Interfraternity banquet to be held in the main ballroom of the Hotel Cornhusker at 6:30 tonight, according to Carlisle Sorenson, committee member in charge of tickets. An advance checkup early Monday afternoon showed that a majority of houses were closing their tables and making plans to attend the affair in a body.

Col. C. J. Frankforter will deliver the principal address of the evening, speaking on "Fraternity Men of Nebraska." Herb Yenne will preside as toastmaster. Other speakers of the evening will be Chancellor E. A. Burnett, Dean T. J. Thompson, and W. C. Harper.

Prof. E. F. Schramm will be in charge of awarding the scholarship cup and fourteen plaques to the fifteen fraternities ranking highest scholastically, an annual feature of the banquet. Farm House was winner of the cup last year.

"The committee feels very fortunate in securing a wonderful menu for this year's banquet at a price of seventy-five cents," Bob Thiel, in charge of the menu, stated. "We feel sure all fraternity men will agree after the banquet."

"The interfraternity banquet is the one time during the year when fraternity men can really get together at a social function," Lloyd Loomis, chairman of the committee stated. "I strongly urge all fraternity men to attend and aid in making this traditional event a success."

Big Array of Talent Secured to Furnish Music at Farmers' Fair

A big array of talent has been secured to furnish the music in the coming Farmer's Fair pageant.

Professor Kirkpatrick of the music department has consented to allow several of his original compositions to be used. The overture, "Nebraska" is his, and the Indian music in the first episode entitled "Spirit of Corn" which accompanies the corn dance of the Indian women. The three selections in episode 2, which shows the coming of the trappers and pioneers, "Westward Ho," "Enavant" and "O Pioneers," with the whip song chorus, are Professor Kirkpatrick's.

The school of music band directed by Professor Quick will play these selections, and the accompaniment to the dances in the episodes and interludes.

The chorus, in charge of Mrs. Tullis will sing in the first, second, third and fifth episodes. They sing several of Mr. Kirkpatrick's compositions.

Among the special numbers is the solo by Mark Hackman in the Indian episode, "Pale Moon," where the young Indian takes leave of the tribe, and the banjo

Nebraska Student Week, that period set aside each year when, through undergraduate direction, university extra-curricular activities go on parade, will be the center of attraction on both the city and agricultural campuses this week.

Most of the week's activities will be concentrated in the three day period beginning Thursday, May 4, and continuing through Saturday. Events scheduled for those days include Ivy Day, Pharmacy night, Engineers' open house, Bizad field day, the Engineers' banquet, and the Farmers' Fair.

Ivy Day, calendared for Thursday, will lead off the week, starting promptly at 9 a. m. with the interfraternity sing in which approximately twelve fraternities will compete. A revision of former procedure brings the Ivy Day oration in the morning program at 10:15. Ralph Rodgers of Lincoln will be the Ivy Day orator.

At 10:30 the daisy and ivy chain bearers will begin the procession (Continued on Page 3.)

BLUE PRINT TO BE ISSUED WEDNESDAY

May Publication Will Be Entirely Devoted to World's Fair.

The Blue Print for May, last issue of the year, will be issued on Wednesday. John Hutchins, editor, announced Monday. The publication will be devoted entirely to the World's Fair and will contain many illustrations.

John T. Coffee, jr., former Nebraskan, has an article in the issue entitled "This International Exposition." Coffee has spent the last few years in Ann Arbor, Mich., and has visited the site of the exposition frequently.

Another article entitled "Electricity Plays Its Part in the Century of Progress Fair," comes from John Clema, an E. E. of 1930 who is now with the Westinghouse corporation.

An advance program of the Engineer's open house will also be included. The publication will consist of eight pages.

and mouthbarp played by "Jim" Metzger for the square dance. The song hits of 1873 will be featured in the 5th episode, by the old time university glee club. They include "Tavern in the Town," "The Spanish Cavalier," and the old favorite "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

Episode 4 is of striking interest this year with five folk dances. Prof. Quick's band will play "The Handkerchief Dance" for the Bohemians, "Waves of Tory" for the Irish, "All Black Brothers" for the Germans, "Little Man in a Fix" for the Scandinavians, and "Kolomeyka" for the Russians.

The music tells the story in the 6th episode, which shows the "economic interlude." While the days of rising prosperity are shown the orchestra plays the "Washington Post March" and "Gallop on the Go." During the intense mental discouragement of the depression a selection called "Aces' Death" will be played, and with the pageant showing the beginning of economic recovery, and the hopeful outlook on the future, the band will end with "America" and "The Stars and Stripes Forever."
