Political Chiseling On Publication Staffs.

WHILE applications pour in for appointments to the staffs of the various publications, we are wondering about the system of appointments as made by the publications board.

The faculty members on the board are for the most part innocent of any knowledge of student politics. They are on the board for the purpose of seeing that the positions go to the people who deserve them.

It is proper, therefore, that there should be student representation on the board. The real purpose of the student representation as we see it, however, is to give the board benefit of more or less intimate knowledge of what is going on in the offices of the Cornhusker, Awgwan, and Daily Nebraskan.

A Great Orchestra Playing For A Great Party---

Pla-Mor scores again! Art Randall and his famous broadcasting band will appear tonight at the Pla-Mor. You've enjoyed hearing this well-known orchestra over the radio, and you'll enjoy dancing to his music equally well.

Students Should Call For Annuals at Once

All students who have not yet obtained their copies of the 1933 Cornhusker should call for it immediately, according to Business Manager Skade.

They should represent the student point of view as to who is worthy of an appointment from the student viewpoint and who is not.

BUT as the system actually works out, the three student representatives are actually faction representatives. They are usually as unfamiliar with the work done in the publications offices as the faculty members.

In other words they usually sit in pub board meetings doing what they can to carve out jobs for their faction henchmen at the expense of the opposite faction applicants.

We are not condemning any student publication board members. We do not assert that this practice of political determination is always adhered to.

But the fact remains that the system of student representation on this appointing body is singularly adapted to the encouragement of political skulduggery.

WE hesitate to suggest the remedy which we are going to suggest because the worldly wise will merely laugh.

This suggestion is that the retiring staff members of each publication be allowed to vote in the selection instead of student members who know little of the actual work in the publications offices.

We boldly claim, however, that this has not been true in the case of Daily Nebraskan appointments for several years.

WE feel that this same tradition could and would be built up by other publications if there was not the feeling that politics were going to enter in anyway.

would not have the face to go before the board with a bunch of recommendations made on political grounds.

But to forestall any possibility of such practice, it would seem eminently fair for the publications board to frankly recognize the existence of faction politics.

In brief this is the plan we should like to see adopted. There is nothing more disillusioning to a student who has worked hard than to see his claim to an appointment passed in favor of someone who for political reasons had a "drag."

Twelve applicants filed for positions on the Cornhusker. Two for editor; four for the two managing editorships; one for the business manager; and five for the two assistant business manager positions were received.

We Think You Must Vote 'Yes.'

WITHOUT making any extravagant claims or attempting any emotional ballyhoo, the Nebraskan today makes its last plea for the activity tax.

Your registration schedule comprises the plan for what will or should constitute your major objective next year. The courses listed on that schedule are the primary reason why you will be here in Lincoln next year.

In fact we will go so far as to maintain that few students would look ahead with any pleasure to a year at Nebraska U if they thought that there was nothing to university life except going to classes and studying.

We who are seniors will not be affected one way or another by your decision on this tax plan, but we sincerely feel that you undergraduates will be very beneficially affected if you vote "yes."
