

FRIDAY EVENING RALLY DESCRIBED AS YEAR'S BEST

Over 2,000 Students Parade Thru Streets and Cheer Later at Stadium.

RAMSAY MAIN SPEAKER

Corn Cobs and Tassels Aid Cheer Leaders in Pep Demonstration.

In the greatest demonstration of pep and spirit this year, more than 2,000 enthusiastic students swarmed into Memorial stadium for the Homecoming rally Friday night to cheer madly for one of the best grid teams in Nebraska history. When the last notes of "The Cornhusker" had died away and the crowd was filling out of the stadium, there remained no doubt but what a distinct revival of student spirit had occurred.

Starts from Temple.

Gathering at the 7:15, the rally was soon organized under direction of Tassels and Corn Cobs. The procession headed by the R. O. T. C. band, followed the usual route up sorority and fraternity row then west to the stadium, but the overflow of pep was the occasion for several brief halts en route while the throng cheered. The entrances to the stadium were mobbed as the crowd sought to enter; it took a good ten minutes for all to get inside.

With Corn Cobs and Tassels lined up in front of the stadium to assist the cheer leaders, the band played the fight songs and several cheers were given. Coach Bible then addressed the crowd briefly and introduced George Sauer, game captain for the Kansas tilt. Sauer commended the student body for its excellent backing of the team and declared that the enthusiastic spirit shown meant a lot to the team.

Ramsay Urges Support.

Ray Ramsay, principal speaker of the evening, asked for support and co-operation of students and alumni alike in making Homecoming this year an event of which all could be proud.

gates and guests registered for this sixth annual meeting of the association, and they represent thirty-five high schools from all over the state of Nebraska. As a climax to the two day session of programs, addresses, and other entertainment, the young journalists and their instructors watched the Kansas-Nebraska football game.

Name Contest Winners.

Winners of Friday's news writing contest were announced at noon today as: Ralph Kline, Omaha Technical high school, and Marjorie Chastain of Benson high school of Omaha. Honorable mention for stories went to Carlos Dey, St. Calhoun; Vedder Stevens, Norfolk; and Kathryn Werner, Lincoln high school. A boy and a girl from each school was allowed to compete, all using the same skeleton set of facts. From this the contestants went to make a story. Judges of the competition were Laurence Hall, Richard Moran, and Bruce Nicol, who represented the university chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, journalistic fraternity.

Outline Discussions.

Round table discussions of various journalistic problems filled most of the morning. L. A. Hines, vice president of the Arts-Crafts Engraving company, St. Louis, Mo., spoke on the present day features and trends in the successful high school annual. Taking up the sports writing problem, Walter E. Dobbins of the Nebraska State Journal described his experiences, and pictured for the journalists the procedure that a reporter might follow in covering a major football game.

E. J. Beaurbidge of the Nebraska Typewriter company based his part in the discussion on the subject of the "Mimeographed Publication."

Gayle C. Walker, director of the University of Nebraska school of journalism, concluded the session with a survey of makeup and typography, stressing those effects to be obtained by a careful use of type, proper headlines, and newspaper arrangement which made the news more interesting to readers.

Attend Banquet.

Friday night 175 delegates attended the association's banquet at the Lindell hotel. Principal speaker for the event was James E. Lawrence, editor of the Lincoln Star, who declared that journalism never offered a greater opportunity for service than today.

"Ability for the student, grind, sympathy and understanding for humanity, and wholesomeness," Lawrence said, "are the three greatest requirements for a good reporter." He warned them to guard against the development of situations in the future such as were built up in the past decade.

"They say you have no perseverance or objectives, but I say that they are wrong," he stated. "The decade from 1920 to 1930 was not a happy one and it was hard to fight for ideals during that period. I believe that you can bring something more to journalism than those in the profession have in the past."

Appreciate State.

The speaker also said that unless they had proper appreciation for their state and people, and the ability to read character in the people with whom they dealt, they had no place in a newspaper office. Describing him as a "marvelous teacher," Lawrence paid tribute to the late Prof. M. M. Fogg as having been the greatest influence in the state for the development of journalistic training in the high schools and university.

Gives Chalk Talk.

Oz Black, cartoonist for the Lincoln Star, entertained the group with a chalk talk. Music for the occasion was presented by the Jolly Rogers quartet, composed of William Miller, Don Jackson, Russ Gillman and Alfred Reich. Parvin Witte also sang.

Students of Jackson high school were in charge of arrangements for the banquet. Betty Magee, Jackson high, was toastmistress, assisted by Edmund Steeves. Miss Louise Nebe was chairman of the committee.

PLAYERS STAGE BROADWAY HIT FOR THIS WEEK

local stage for the first time since his return to Lincoln. He was formerly a member of the players, but during the past few years has been appearing in the major plays on Broadway. Besides having played in the play, Mr. Sumption is also responsible for a previous staging of it.

An event of importance will be the appearance of Miss H. Alice Howell, head of the dramatics department, in the role of the hostess, whose dinner party precipitates the action of the play.

Herbert Yenne also returns to the Temple theater boards for the first time this season to play an excellent character role.

Mae Posey Has Role.

Mae Posey provides one of the brightest spots in the cast with her role, which Jean Harlow plays in the film version of the play.

Dorothy Zimmer, whose performances in the past have won for her a considerable following, is cast in the striking role of an actress.

Jane McLaughlin, playing one of her first major parts with the players, has the role of the vivacious daughter of the hostess. She plays opposite Mr. Yenne in some of the outstanding scenes of the play.

Lauren Gilbert, graduate of the College of Fine Arts at the University of Michigan, is making his second appearance with the players, when he appears as Dr. J. Warren Talbot. The players audience will remember him for his work as Mr. Tallant in "The Late Christopher Bean."

Achieve Professional Rating.

The play was written by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber and originally produced by Sam H. Harris in the Music Box theater in New York. The presentation of the play in Lincoln so soon after its Broadway run in an unusual situation for the players, but it is made possible by the fact that the university thespians have recently achieved professional rating and are able to secure better plays.

The staging of "Dinner at Eight" is one of the most difficult tasks ever attempted on the Temple theater stage. In the New York production rolling platforms were used with each platform being a separate set of scenery. There are seven different stage settings, which are used in the eleven scenes of the play.

Ingenious Arrangement.

An ingenious arrangement has been worked out for the players' production that will be almost as expedient as that used in the large New York theaters. Instead of using the large platforms, which are wheeled on the stage for the various scenes, the seven sets of scenery will be suspended above the Temple theater stage and dropped when needed.

REFER REQUEST OF NEW ARMOY TO WASHINGTON

Buckner declared that the erection of new military quarters was in contradiction with the peace movements of all nations. Furthermore, the university is in greater need of other and more appropriate buildings such as a library, the group asserted. They also pointed out that cost of maintaining the proposed armory would result in expenditures of approximately $13,000 which would have to be borne by taxpayers.

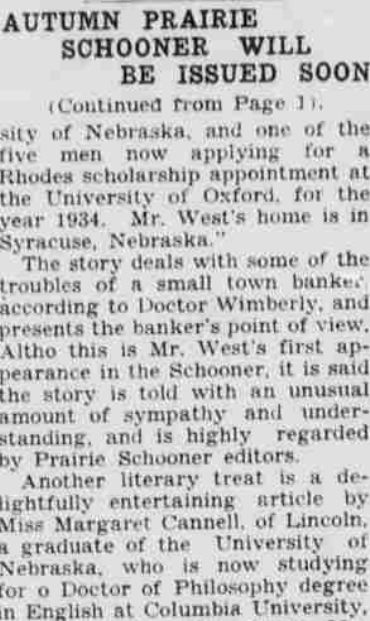

Rev. Buckner said that Chancellor Burnett asked what would city of Nebraska, and one of the five men now applying for a Rhodes scholarship appointment at the University of Oxford, for the year 1934. Mr. West's home is in Syracuse, Nebraska.

The story deals with some of the troubles of a small town banker, according to Doctor Wimberly, and presents the banker's point of view. Altho this is Mr. West's first appearance in the Schooner, it is said the story is told with an unusual amount of sympathy and understanding, and is highly regarded by Prairie Schooner editors.

Another literary treat is a delightfully entertaining article by Miss Margaret Cannell, of Lincoln, a graduate of the University of Nebraska, who is now studying for a Doctor of Philosophy degree in English at Columbia University, New York City. Miss Emma McRae, prominent poet of Omaha, has an original poem in the magazine. Both Miss Cannell and Miss McRae have contributed frequently to Prairie Schooner and Miss McRae has appeared in numerous other literary publications.

The issue soon to be released will be Volume 7, number 4. During its short life of seven years, the Schooner, under the able direction of Doctor Wimberly, himself a successful author of national recognition, has carved a prominent niche for itself in the international literary hall of fame. The business manager, Mr. Harry Foster, states that copies are mailed regularly to France, Spain, Canada, Hawaii, England, Venezuela, and other distant points.

MEDLAR WILL SPEAK ON RURAL ECONOMICS

Ag Professor Addresses New Social Order Staff at Monday Meeting.

The new Social Order Staff, under Elizabeth Rowan, has secured Professor Medlar to give the first of a series of three talks on Rural Economics. The staff holds its meetings at four o'clock on Mondays in the dining room at Ellen Smith hall. Miss Rowan invites all students who are interested to attend.

Miss Bernice Miller, Y. W. C. A. secretary, in commenting on the series of three talks on rural economics to be given before the New Social Order staff said, "This series of talks has been organized to answer the questions in the minds of students who live on farms or in farming communities. Any who attends this series of three discussions, led by Professor Medlar, I am sure will be able to discuss intelligently the implications of the Farmer's Holiday Association and the government program for agricultural recovery. "Some of our state officials feel that the government's program is doing more harm than good to the farmer. We will all need to pull together on such a program if it is to be a success and we can do this more intelligently by being informed on these questions. Any student is welcome to attend these meetings at four o'clock for the next three weeks."
