Bibles Necessary Reference Books States Miss Clara Craig, Librarian; Places Large Collection on Display

"Is there a Bible here in the library?" someone asks quite often at the University.

"Is there a Bible?" echoes Miss Clara Craig, reference librarian, in surprise. "Not only one, but many. We couldn't get along at all without them. Professors and students every day call for translations. Some of them want to show the power of the Bible's philosophy and ethics for again a class in literature is studying it."

To prove her point, Miss Craig last week placed on exhibit in the entrance to the main library several Bibles from the University's collection. On one shelf is an edition of the "Vulgate," published in some past century, now with worn cover and yellowed leaves. Below it is a "Geneva" version edited in 1609, and near it is the Douay Bible. ## SCHOONER DRIVE SALESMEN MAKE INITIAL REPORT

Checkout Reveals Total of 29 Subscriptions Sold Thus Far.

LANTZ ADDRESSES GROUP

Wimberly and Yenne Will Speak to Workers at Next Meeting.

With the first report meeting, which was held Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Ellen Smith hall, the Prairie Schooner drive which is to last all this week was begun in earnest.

A checkup of subscriptions showed a total of 29 sold, with Bash Perkins' team in the lead with seven subscriptions. This report however was incomplete since many of the workers were absent.

Prof. Earl W. Lantz, of the education department, spoke to the workers on how to sell their product. Expressing confidence in the success of drive, he urged the girls to believe sincerely in the worth of their product before they attempted to sell it.

"Don't make apologies when you approach someone," he said. "You're really doing every person to whom you sell a subscription a favor; the Schooner is indirectly valuable to every individual in the university because it is of tremendous value to the University of Nebraska."

The second report meeting will be held in Ellen Smith Hall today at 4 o'clock. Dr. Lowry C. Wimberly, editor of the Schooner, and Herb Yenne of the dramatics department will be the speakers.

The class is held for sixteen weeks during the winter months and two years are required for its completion. The short course offers such agricultural subjects as rural economics, animal husbandry, crop marketing, and farm accounting. The entire course is composed of subjects of a practical nature for agricultural students.

Within the last two weeks two judging contests, one on judging crops and the other on animal husbandry, were held for the benefit of the class. In the first of the contests the members of the class competed with the full time students of the college. While they placed nearly as many times, they did not receive as high awards as the full time students who exhibited greater ability received from longer training.

CORNHUSKER SALES ARE SATISFACTORY, MANAGER DECLARES

Thiel States Possible to Get Yearbook Before Mar. 15.

Sales during the final sales drive for the 1934 Cornhusker were reported quite satisfactory by Bob Thiel, business manager of the year book, Saturday. Thiel declared that the sales were up to the average, and although no official check-up has been made as yet, the figure would well exceed one hundred. The figures for the total number of books sold during the entire year are not as yet available.

Thiel called attention to the fact that while the final sales drive is over it is still possible to order a Cornhusker up to March 15, by calling at the Cornhusker office in the basement of University Hall. All salesmen have ceased to canvass organized houses on the campus, and Thursday March 15 is the absolute deadline for orders to be placed. The price is still $4.50 cash or in installments—of $2.50 down and the balance of $2.25 when the book arrives. On March 15, all orders will be sent in to the printer and cover manufacturer to be made up.

Many New Features. Thiel declared the many new features incorporated in this book greatly enhance its value, and though the purchase price is soon forgotten this book, which is filled with memories of Nebraska, will become more precious as the years go by.

According to Bob Thiel the outstanding characteristics of this year's annual are new designs and unique features. Some of the unique features are:

Wisconsin Occupational Study Reveals Worker Must Be More Versatile, Able Get Along With Others to Be in Demand

From the University of Wisconsin press bulletin comes interesting information in regard to a series of nationwide occupational trend and demand studies just completed by the university's bureau of vocational guidance. Carried on during the past year by Prof. A. H. Edgerton, director of vocational guidance, the occupational studies are expected to be of great assistance to state university graduates and guidance workers in Wisconsin.

One of the important findings of these studies is that if the employe of the future is to get and hold a job in a successful manner, he must learn to control his emotions as well as he does his motions while he is at work. Furthermore, the future employe will no longer be able to get along successfully by just knowing how to do only one kind of a job. He must prepare for and do well two or three different kinds of work rather than one very specialized type as has been the case in the past.

With the co-operation of eighty-four persons drawn largely from a committee of the National Society for the Study of Education which has been evaluating guidance work, 338 representative employes, both large and small, were interviewed as a basis for the study. The analysis forms used in the study were filled out for 1,132 separate job specifications involving 4,104 actual positions in twenty-nine states.

To fulfill the job requirements of a new time, employes suggest that more be done in having students' attitudes reflect the fact that life, although interesting, like-the NRA came into being, banded together to form a fair code of advertising ethics and that newspapers should receive credit for the fact that they refuse to accept many dollars worth of advertising which they could legally accept. He added that there is not a newspaper in Nebraska that could not paper a large profit this year if it were willing to accept some of the advertising which they are so frequently offered.

"The Twigg bill and the Copeland bill now before committees in congress represent the most recent efforts to cure abuses in advertising. Why is it, therefore, that advertising men who have been active for more than twenty years in their efforts to eliminate the dishonest advertiser seem to oppose these two bills? It is because they have found from years of experience that you cannot legislate morals, and truth in advertising is entirely a moral matter. They know that the dishonest advertiser finds a way around any legislation that is passed."
