AND FIRST WE HEARD IT WAS JAN Garber and then that it was no one at all, but we finally discovered that it was Red Nichols who was playing in Omaha last night. A number of students made the trip to hear him, although Lincoln was not noticeably deserted. They say that one of the biggest crowds of the year, excepting the major parties at the coliseum, attended the Sig Ep "blue" party Friday night at the Cornhusker. Even the invitations were blue, although the atmosphere was not, with one of the gayest crowds of the season in attendance.

ST. PATRICK'S day came and went without much ado, except for the Alpha Chi party, for which the invitations were in the shape of green shamrocks. The old Irish custom of wearing green seems to have become less prevalent, at least here.

LETTERS OF FAMOUS COMPOSER REVEAL FEELINGS FOR LAST PRODUCTION; TO BE PLAYED BY CONCERT ORCHESTRA TODAY.

To some listeners the Symphony is the life of a man. The second movement is glad and joyful, until the trio stops the orgy. In this trio, Death beats the drum. With Tchaikowsky, here the drum is the most tragic of instruments. The persistent beating of it is despairing and not untouched with irony. It is for that same, who do not love the composer, call him a barbarian and a savage.

In his third movement—the march-scherzo, the "Pathetic" reaches its full despair of darkness and the miserable oblivion of death. With desperate hopelessness the Russian composer seems to come to the end of his faith and anticipation. Shelley writes of the Symphony: "Tchaikowsky in this symphony has stained eternity's radiance; he has captured the years and bound them into a momentary emotional pang."

The Sixth Symphony was first performed in America by the Symphony Society of New York in 1894, with Walter Damrosch as conductor. Since that time its tragic notes have flowed around the world, part of the world's symphony of despair. At its many recitals it has been acclaimed by great critics of music, and continues in popularity.

Other numbers to be played by the University orchestra during this afternoon will be Tchaikowsky's "Waltz of the Flowers" from the "Nutcracker Suite," George Gershwin's composition "Rhapsody in Blue" will prove an interesting variation on the program. The overture "Frieschutz" by Weber; and "Dance of the Clowns" by Rimsky-Korsakov are to be played by the musicians.
