Let's Get Together!

Generally speaking one could say that the student body has taken the defeat of Nebraska by Minnesota in a very sportsmanlike fashion, just as it should take it. Every one is looking forward to the Iowa game Saturday with anticipation of seeing two great teams in action, and watching an improved Husker eleven exhibit its prowess.

Friday evening there will be a torchlight rally going at the stadium in a few moments of grand climax. The rally committee has done royally so far this season, and gives promise of proving thru action that the rally committee plan started this fall is a good one.

Coach Bible has time and time again stated that student support means a lot to the team, particularly to a group of sophomores experiencing their first touches of intercollegiate football against great inter-sectional foes. Iowa is reputed to be just as good as the Gophers were at Minneapolis, but they have more to cope with in Nebraska than did Minnesota, because they meet the Biblemen on Nebraska memorial stadium sod. Inexperienced men always fall to show the goods during the first few games on foreign fields, but with the crowd behind them at home often attain dizzy heights.

The Hawkeyes will be fighting Saturday with blood in their eyes. The Iowa Cityans have a score to settle with the Scarlet footballers, because Nebraska's victories in the past two years have both been by one point, 14 to 13 and 7 to 6.

Between the halves of the Iowa game yell-leaders will announce to the student cheering section an innovation. The exhibition, in which all must cooperate, will be breath-taking if all the students, older followers, and knot-holders cooperate. The demonstration will be thrilling and will mean a lot to the team, Coach Bible declared Thursday. He asks for support, and students should give it unstintingly.

Before Saturday's game with Iowa learn "The Cornhusker," "There is No Place Like Nebraska," the other songs, and the yells that all of you have heard, but few seem to know.

Friday night there will be a rally starting from the Temple building at 6:45. For the first time in several years there will be a torch-light parade. The more students who turn out for the demonstration, the more noise there will be, the more thrilling will be the spectacle, and the more will the team appreciate the support.

Let's get together on these songs and yells and show a little real Nebraska spirit!

Kosmet Klub must be in cahoots with the Cornhusker. They are now falling in line with the annual by extending a deadline.

The Dean Replies.

TO THE EDITOR:

In your editorial of Wednesday you have suggested that the rules and regulations of the University be published and be given wider distribution. Perhaps you are right. Personally, however, I am strongly against anything that will encourage the establishment of more rules and regulations except of the most general nature. It is my opinion that to have a handbook of rules and regulations as so many institutions do serves as a temptation and an encouragement for the establishment of an increasingly large number of obnoxious and petty rules. In fact, since I came into this office I have made a desperate attempt, in so far as possible, to reduce the number of rules to the minimum.

Moreover, it is my opinion that such rules as we have at the University of Nebraska are at present given rather wide publication and distribution. Each of the catalogs of the undergraduate colleges, together with the general catalog, carries a summary if not the complete text of the regulations relative to student organizations and social functions. You may do a real service for the University faculty and administration if you will use your columns to call these sections to the attention of the students.

In addition to the information published in the catalogs, the Committee on Student Organizations and Social Functions has always reprinted certain of the published rules that apply more particularly to students' social affairs. These have been distributed by the Dean of Women's office by mail to all organizations holding social affairs, and additional copies are usually given the officers of organizations when they come making inquiry concerning social matters. This ought to give them rather wide distribution.

Contrary to the impression given by your editorial, neither the Committee nor any of its members was particularly interested in whether the Corn Cobs or the Barb Council give the party on next Saturday night. The Committee was greatly interested, however, in the proposal of the Corn Cobs that the proceeds from the party were to be used to provide the members of the Corn Cob organization with a trip with the football team, with athletic tickets, with sweaters, etc. Personal-ally, I am very much opposed to any organization such as the Corn Cobs expending money collected from subscription dances or parties, from sales such as caps to freshmen, and so forth, for its members without the proper authorization from the properly constituted authorities. Speaking parenthetically, if the Corn Cobs organization is valuable as a "pep" organization to athletics and to the success of our athletic teams, I believe its transportation with the team to such events should be paid for with the athletic receipts.

In order to bring this matter more forcibly before the student organizations, the Committee on Student Organizations and Social Functions over a year ago adopted a procedure and set up certain stipulations covering the sale of tickets, expenditure of money collected, and the audit of all student mimeographed by this office and mailed to all organizations who had their accounts on file at the Student Activities office. Moreover, the Faculty Committee on Student Organizations and Social Functions in its meeting on Monday reiterated its position concerning the handling of student organization accounts. These stipulations were zation moneys in the following words:

Each student organization (except fraternities and sororities) shall submit a detailed budget covering its dues, earnings, and expenditures of every nature, bearing the approval of the organization's faculty sponsor, and subject to such direction as may be deemed necessary by the Committee or its subcommittee on budgets, audits, and expenditures, to the Student Activities Agent for approval. Each organization shall conform to its approved budget in so far as its expenditures are concerned.

For the information of the University public, I shall be glad to have you publish these remarks. Yours sincerely,
T. J. THOMPSON,
Dean of Student Affairs.

It's nice to see undergraduates getting the leads in University Players productions for a change.

A Justifiable Complaint.

TO THE EDITOR:

It has been very evident that a number of people have been careless about throwing waste paper, cigarette stubs, matches, and what-not in the halls of Social Sciences building.

This very thoughtless practice not only makes a lot of extra work for the janitors but it also gives the institution a very bad appearance and reputation. As a matter of fact I have heard many remark that the place looked more like a pool hall than a hall of learning. Now whose fault is this?

People who are so thoughtless as to drop bits of waste matter on the floor instead of putting it in the waste paper baskets or other receptacles provided for the purpose should change their ways. They should remember that this university belongs to the student body just as much as it does to the Chancellor or any of the professors, that it is supported by taxation, that its governing body is elected by popular vote, and therefore should take some pride in it. So why not try to keep its buildings as desirable and presentable as we should have our homes.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT

Youth Works Toward Peace.

Secretary of War George H. Dern, in an address to the Daughters of the American Revolution said, "Nineteen hundred years ago the Prince of Peace preached peace on earth. Also we Christians give lip service to that exalted ideal, candor compels us to admit that the Christian era is a record of one war after another. Our own peace loving country has had six major wars, and has been at war one year in every eight of its brief existence. The army did not cause any one of the wars, but it stopped every one of them. The people bring about wars, and the army brings about peace."

That would be a very fine statement for the president of a great munitions factory to make, but coming from a member of the national administration, it is an insult and a falsehood.

In a fight for the abolishment of the R. O. T. C. we are continually being greeted with such stock excuses as "preparedness" and "defense" as justification for a program of armament building and military training. The staunch supporters of R. O. T. C. training are always quick to point out that the men being trained are not receiving the military instructions for combative purposes, but rather to be used in the defense of our country from mythical invaders.

We seek to point out to these militarists that the real defense of our country lies not in the strength of its army or the military aptitude of a few thousand men, but rather in its economic impregnability. The truth of this argument could be seen in the case of the Chaco dispute. American war material was used, almost entirely and nearly all the soldiers ate American rations. If we were to refuse these materials to other nations, then they would be unable to wage wars. So it will be if a war should happen to break out in Europe at this time. No nation could start or long wage a war without having to apply to American merchants and bankers for aid. If we refused it, then the war would soon dwindle into mere gnashing of teeth and pointed accusations.

History can cite no example of a war having been averted by preparedness. However, history can repeatedly cite examples of wars having been either shortly ended or avoided entirely because the warring factions were economically too poor to fight. In her economic strength lies America's real preparedness. Instead of training a few thousand students how to become better cannon fodder, we suggest that these same students be taught how to make use of America's industries and raw materials to avoid wars altogether. Also, it would be an excellent idea to teach these same students a few lobbying tricks, to be used as a defense against powerful lobbyists, who represent shipbuilders and manufacturers of armor plates and armaments.

A new war would not be fought by those who are advocating it, but would be fought by us. We resent the attempts of our elders to make us march along a path which has brought them and us as much misery. We would rather free ourselves from this idiotic slavery to the Gods of War, and would spend our time in studying ways of peace and good fellowship among the young peoples of our own and other nations. We would start this program by eliminating everything which has to do with militarism in our own country. And, in our estimation, nothing could afford a better start than the death of the R. O. T. C.

Y. W. C. A. STAFF TEAS START ANNUAL DRIVE

Groups Invite New Girls to Join at Affairs in Ellen Smith.

The first of a series of teas given by the Y. W. C. A. to begin its membership drive for the year, were held Thursday, Oct. 11, at Ellen Smith hall. The social group sponsored one of these teas from 4 to 5 o'clock and the Vesper and Church Relations staffs another from 5 to 6 o'clock.

Six more teas will be given thru-out October. Each will be sponsored by a Y. W. staff. Oct. 12, the Social Order and Estes groups will preside from 4 to 5, and from 5 to 6 the Nebraska in China and International staffs will be in charge. Oct. 19, finance and swap shop groups will preside from 4 to 5; Oct. 25, forum and vespers groups from 4 to 5; choir and vespers groups from 5 to 6.

Y. W. members are asked to invite to these teas three friends who would like to join, at which time they can sign for membership. Other girls who have not been invited and would like to come may make arrangements in the Y. W. office at Ellen Smith hall.

CHANTS

By MEREDITH OVERPECK.

Between acts of "The Shining Hour," Dwight Perkins, the juvenile lead, has been quite nicely entertained by three young ladies who are quite essential parts of the behind scenes company. The prop girl, who is a Kappa; the Pi Phi prompter and another Pi Phi, often seen around the dramatics department, are the attractive trio.

Jock, famous canine of Doctor Leland, has been the guest the past few days of Miss Polly Gelatly of the drama department. As Jock intends to stay over the week end, we heard that he was given a bath and sprayed with Luciene Le Long perfume, so as to make a good impression on friends of his hostess.

On Monday and Tuesday of this week, Theodore C. Diers, supervisor of extension in music, accompanied by Mrs. Diers attended a convention at the Cedar County Teacher's Institute at Hartington, Nebraska. While there Mr. Diers was one of the speakers on the program, and demonstrated a plan of teaching music and singing in a one room rural school. Mrs. Diers, contralto, sang "Little Boy Blue" and "Sweetest Flower That Grows," for the assemblage, with Mr. Diers at the piano. At a meeting of the Hartington Lions club, Mrs. Diers repeated the selections and sang "You Along With Me" and "Four Leaf Clover."

Miss Lucille Cypreansen is conducting an interesting course in speech re-education every Wednesday evening at seven o'clock at the Temple. The course is especially designed to meet the needs of individual speech problems. Corrective work will be given in cases of stammering, stuttering, speech substitutions, strained voice and other speech problems. Each student is entitled to one-half hour of private instruction and private lessons can be arranged.

One of the prominent Pi Beta Phi who is leaving the campus shortly is Barbara Bates. She plans to depart October 17 for the American Academy of Arts in New York City, where she will study dramatics. She will enroll as a junior. During her two years here Barbara took part in "Mr. Theatre productions; was in "Mr. Dooley, Jr." when the Children's Theatre presented it, and last year made her debut as a University Player in "Counselor at Law."

entirely different standard than American universities. Miss Seybolt explained. In Germany only young people of a higher than average intelligence and ability get to go to the schools of higher learning. For this reason more is expected of them than of American students. Exams are given only at the end of the four year course, and they cover the main points taught during the entire four years.

Miss Seybolt found that the homes in Germany are quite similar to those in the United States. "There are many things, however, which we consider necessary that you cannot get in Germany," she said. Among these are soda and baking powder, canned corn, oysters, watermelon, and good salmon. "There is plenty of sauerkraut and weiners," she remarked.

Request for Water Quer.

"They think you are queer if you ask for water with your meals. German people drink nothing so weak, yet drunkenness is most uncommon. German people, on a whole, like music. It is not uncommon for everyone in a restaurant to strike up a tune. Anything for a good time; and yet their idea of a good time is quite different from ours. They love to walk. Just as we go riding on Sunday afternoons, they go walking. Whole families enjoy their Sunday afternoon strolls.

Girls in Germany, Miss Seybolt found, do not wear make-up. They think it artificial and unnatural, and therefore unattractive. The German mode of salutation is unique. When they meet in the street men tip their hats, say "Heil Hitler!" and shake hands. They always shake hands again before taking leave of each other.

Miss Seybolt is entering this university as a junior this year. She returned from Germany this summer, after spending a year there with her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Herbert, both former Nebraska university students. While staying in Germany she also made short trips to England, Holland, Belgium, France, Italy, Switzerland, Austria and Hungary. "I want to go back as soon as I'm graduated," she says.
