CAMPUS POLITICAL GROUPS ENCOURAGE STUDENTS TO VOTE

Non-Residents May Complete Registration for Elections By Mail.

With less than a week before the fall general elections, campus political organizations are exercising every effort to encourage students of legal age to go to the polls next Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Students who have failed to register for the elections may still exercise their franchise, if a quick action is taken, it was pointed out. According to the law, persons whose residence is in other sections of the state than in Lincoln may vote by mail, or with special arrangements may register where their cities are of 7,000 or more population.

To vote by mail, students of legal voting age should write to the county clerk of their home county, asking him to mail a ballot. Ballots used under these circumstances must be returned to the county clerk on or before Saturday evening, Nov. 3, properly notarized and sealed.

For a limited number of students the county clerk of Lancaster county will be able to save this trouble. He will supply non-resident mail ballots, which are to be mailed to the county clerk of the home county on Saturday of this week.

Additional registration in all cities of 7,000 or over should have been completed last Saturday, it was pointed out by a sworn affidavit, signed by two freeholders, stating reasons why registration was not completed, and presented to the clerk of the home county, will permit students to vote in their home cities.

THURSDAY NOON ENDS FILING FOR RHODES CONTEST

Wednesday Checkup Reveals Three Names Entered In Competition.

FIVE MAY BE SELECTED

Oldfather Unable to Explain Lack of Student Interest.

Deadline for entering Rhodes scholarship competition falls at noon Thursday, and unless there is an unexpected last-minute rush not more than six or seven university students are expected to bid for the honors this year, Dean C. H. Oldfather, chairman of the university committee, announced Wednesday afternoon.

But three candidates had filed to compete for the scholarships by Wednesday afternoon, although three or four others had announced that they were planning to enter the lists before the deadline arrives, Dean Oldfather stated.

Candidates will appear before the university committee in Dean Oldfather's office at 9 a. m. Saturday to compete for the right to enter the state competition, according to plans announced late Wednesday. Members of the committee serving under Dean Oldfather are Dr. Samuel Avery, Dr. J. P. Senning, Dr. E. H. Barbour, and Prof. M. H. Merrill.

State Competition Still Keen. Although interest in the Rhodes scholarship appears to be far lower than in the past on the Nebraska campus, competition for the right to enter the state competition will be just as keen this year as ever, according to Dean Oldfather.

"We are allowed to select five outstanding candidates from our university to enter the state competition," said Dean Oldfather, "but that does not mean that we must necessarily choose that number. If there is but one outstanding candidate entered, then we will choose but one to represent our school. If but five file, and the committee considers all of them outstanding, we shall of course name those five to appear before the state committee."

Four Selected from District. The two outstanding candidates from all of the schools in the state will advance from there to the district competition, where they will compete against the two outstanding candidates from Minnesota, South Dakota, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri. The four outstanding candidates from that group will receive the scholarships to Oxford university in England, valued at 400 pounds a year.

Almost twice as many university students entered the Rhodes competition last year, when 13 eligible students appeared before the university committee, and Dean Oldfather is at a loss to explain the lack of interest by eligible students this year.
