

CONQUERORS OF EAST TO INVADE HUSKER DOMAIN

Scarlet Fans Place Game on Par With Historical Events.

WOME VICTORIES SCARCE

Pittsburgh Aply Named as Undisputed King of East.

Pittsburgh is coming to town! To even the least rabid of the sons and followers of the Scarlet and Cream, that signifies events of immense importance. Along with the revolutionary war, signing of the armistice and sundry other noteworthy historical occurrences, the true son of Nebraska places a Pittsburgh-Nebraska game on the archives of time. And well do these intersectional clashes of stalwart sons of the gridiron deserve the place allotted to them by the Huskers.

An invasion of the prairie lands of Nebraska by the raging, clawing Panthers is the signal for the entire state to rise up, to cheer its cohorts on in the mad scramble for victory over those proud, haughty conquerors from the east. For only once in the history of matches between the two universities, has the familiar Scarlet and Cream left the field with the score in its favor. Ties, there have been plenty, but victories on Memorial stadium turf have been as scarce as the proverbial hens teeth.

It all began back in 1921, when Nebraska sent a team to the Smoky City, then the harbor of the nation's leading grid teams. Pittsburgh was exceptionally strong that year, too strong for the Huskers, according to all advanced dope. Nebraska was just a breather for the mighty Panthers, but when the final minutes ticked off, Nebraska was the victor by a 10 to 0 score.

That seemed to arouse the beast in the Panthers, and they have since that extremely unfortunate set-to always proved too good for the Nebraska invaders or hosts, as the case might be. Since that November afternoon in Pittsburgh, thirteen years ago, Nebraska has never beaten the eastern aggregation, and, in 1931 suffered the worst defeat ever administered to them, taking a 40 to 0 shellacking at the hands of these same Panthers.

The years rolled by, always with Pitt the dominating one, the conquering one. But one ray of sunshine penetrated the gloom into which the Panther coming plunged the champions of the cornbelt. This was tie games. In 1928, '30, and '32 the Nebraska lads turned the trick on their home field, holding the Panthers to scoreless ties. It was from this as much as any other engagements that the reputation of being practically unbeatable in Memorial Stadium was built around the Huskers.

Last year was a heartbreaker for the invading Nebraska grid team. Three bitter quarters were fought through, before the Panthers managed to sneak in six points via the aerial route. Those six won the game.

1934, and once more there comes a time on the calendar when Pittsburgh's Panthers and Nebraska's Cornhuskers clash on the greenward—this time in Memorial Stadium, Lincoln.

Pittsburgh is the undisputed king of the east. The Panthers have stormed their way through all opposition, had flattened everybody before they met up with Minnesota's juggernaut. The Pitt throne wavered, toppled to a 13 to 7 defeat. But that loss, instead of destroying the faith with which the Panthers have faced the football world, has strengthened their desire to finish the season with no more blemishes on their record.

Saturday Prof. Jock Sutherland brings his pupils to Memorial Stadium. His advanced scholars will face the but recently initiated group headed by Dana X. Bible. It's been somewhat of a tradition in the Husker circles, at least since 1928, that even years should end in scoreless ties. Professor Sutherland comes to upset tradition. That's the purpose of D. X. Bible's youngsters also—they're going to upset tradition, the dope bucket, and give the football world a real shock by coming out on the long end of that count next Saturday afternoon.

SPORTSING

One of the most thrilling games this last week end was Chicago's defeat in the Big Ten conference race at the hands of Purdue, another undefeated team in the set-up. 26 to 20 the score read, and the stands were on their feet throughout the game. Never a dull moment with Berwanger of Chicago and Carter and Purvis, the original touchdown twins of Purdue.

Story and rumor has it that Cotton Wharburton went to Hollywood this summer to crash the movies. The czar of the movie world did not seem to take any note of the little fellow other than to give him a role in a college picture as a peanut vendor.

Cotton's case is extremely interesting. There is a bundle of energy and nerves wrapped up into about one hundred and twenty pounds of flesh. He is working his way through University of Southern California.

He needs the rest of a good football team before he can star. If he has no one to run interference then Cotton is through for the day. Except for one thing, that is he is pretty handy at doing the interference himself at times.

Perhaps no other football player ever drew the spotlight of public attention on him as did Wharburton last year as he swept down the field behind perfect interference of the Southern California huskies to score on fifty, sixty, and seventy-five yard runs.

Nebraska athletic officials will take no chance of the field being too wet for the Pitt game. Every day a group of freshmen who are regularly employed in covering the field will see that the green canvass is in its place before night fall.

The thing that Nebraska must have before it can beat Pittsburgh is spirit. That is the key-note of Oklahoma when Nebraska goes down to the Norman camp. For weeks before the game there are pep rallies and by the time the game is called all of the Sooner camp is at fever pitch.

It must be the same at Nebraska for the Pitt game. Only one victory. That is something to worry about. It is almost inconceivable that any team should hold the Cornhuskers year after year.

We are due for a break and this is the time to show that everyone is behind the team. Impromptu rallies do not help as much as organized movements. The R. O. T. C. division is planning to parade for the team and show them that they are one hundred percent behind them during the morning of Armistice Day.

That should be the lead for other organizations to do the same thing. Years after the game is played, we will probably forget all about it, but at this time it should be foremost in our minds.

Sing Sing's prison football team was treated to a steak dinner when they beat Georgia Watermelon Seeds, from Atlanta. Warden Lawes decided that his boys deserved a treat. The Sing Sing team has not had its goal line crossed this season.

The students at U. C. L. A. were given a treat last week when they were chance to see the Olympic diving champions, Farid Simaika and Harold "Dutch" Smith in action at their Westwood pool. No other event held in the Westwood pool has aroused as much interest

The Iowa Student Sports Editor had this to say of Nebraska's coming game with Pittsburgh.

"Nebraska lost to Minnesota. Right now, the Huskers are slated to annex their sixth championship, and their early season drubbing at the hands of Minnesota was largely a game that served to introduce Coach Dana X. Bible's green hands to this business of corn husking. They are much stronger now, and their comparative strength in mid-western and national circles will be better determined after next week, when the Nebraska team meets Pittsburgh on their home field.

Another tie game complicated Big Six standings this week as the scoreless tussle of Iowa State and Kansas at Ames was chalked up on the books. Kansas and Oklahoma tied 7 to 7 last week. Oklahoma's 31 to 0 shellacking of Missouri was the other conference game of last week and was played at Norman.

The Jayhawkers did something that neither Nebraska nor Missouri could do with the Cyclones and that was outdrown and outgain them. Kansas piled up 10 first downs and 214 yards from the scrimmage while the Veenker eleven made only three first downs and 96 yards from scrimmage. The Jays also lost 55 yards through penalties while Iowa State was losing only five.

Neither team came within scoring distance, altho Kansas had little trouble punching holes in the Cyclone line out in the middle of the field where it didn't make much difference. The Veenker backs were never able to gain materially and Freddy Poole's punts were consistently returned back into home town territory.

Big "Nig" Robertson and Benny Poyner ran wild over Missouri at Norman Saturday as the Sooners rolled up 31 points and held the visiting eleven scoreless. More than 12,000 Sooner homecoming fans saw the game.

Kansas State, the only other Big Six club in action Saturday, counted a 14 to 6 victory over Washburn college in Topeka. Stoner contributed the first place touchdown on a 30-yard punt, and Ayres added the second on a 10-yard plunge. The Ichabods scored on an intercepted pass, Niedhart racing 88 yards to score. Stoner added both extra points from placement.

The weatherman connived against the Nebraska frosh as their scheduled tussle with the varsity was called off. As the Huskers have a full slate from now on in, it is probable that the game will not be played.

The most important Big Six game this week will be the Iowa State-Oklahoma affair at Norman where the two clubs will be fighting it out for a place in the sun. Both are strong, and are, at present, tied for third place behind Nebraska and Kansas State. A victory for either one would probably mean a second place spot on a tie for second as the Huskers should defeat Kansas State, Missouri probably will do little more than strengthen Kansas State's hold at Manhattan Saturday.
