IOWA NOT ON SCHEDULE

Representative Slate Planned For Biblemen During Coming Season.

1935 FOOTBALL SCHEDULE. Sept. 28: University of Chicago at Lincoln. Oct. 5: Iowa State College at Ames.

Nebraska's Cornhuskers added another bombshell to their 1935 football schedule with the signing of Clark Shaugnessy's Chicago University Maroons to appear on Memorial Stadium turf Sept. 23.

Speaking of the completed schedule, Coach Bible said: "I have felt this year because of the fine attendance that the public is entitled to the best game possible and in signing Chicago I firmly believe that our 1935 schedule is the best and certainly one of the most representative in Nebraska's football history."

Chicago is comparatively a newcomer in Husker gridiron annals. A renewal of relations between the two institutions recalls the only game previously played, one that the Maroons won, 38 to 5, in Chicago (Continued on Page 2.)

Evolution, Development Modern Title Page Revealed in Present Exhibit at Library, Arranged by Miss Craig

Imagine opening a copy of Anthony Adverse to find that the first words in the book were: "Here beginneth"—(naming the subject matter) and jumping immediately into the novel without notice of title, dedication, date printed, or publishing company. This would have been the fate of Allen's 'elephant' if it had been written before 1457, according to the present library exhibit arranged by Miss Clara Craig, reference librarian. This exhibit is intended to show the evolution of the title page by means of a number of typewritten explanations and actual illustrations. Before the invention of the printing press, copyists found their task so arduous that the book consisted of the manuscript alone. Often the printer's name was not mentioned, the exhibit shows. Pust and Schoeffer, printers thought to have been contemporaries of Gutenberg, introduced the first colophon, a page devoted to the particulars concerning the author, date and place of production and often expressing the thankfulness of the author, scribe, or (Continued on Page 2.)

Professor Vraz took for examples the basis economic programs of Italy, Germany, and France, and pointed out that the success of these systems cannot be judged from the apparent worth of the system itself. "That system is a success," he stated, "which at a given period of a nation's development seems to give the maximum satisfaction possible to the largest number of people."

"Any system can be a success under certain conditions," Professor Vraz declared, "given excellent leadership and social and economic conditions peculiarly adapted to it, just as individual success is 95 per cent (Continued on Page 3.)

Frosh Hear History, Purpose, Activities, Of Big Sister Board

The purpose, history and activities of the Big Sister board were explained to the freshman A. W. S. group at the weekly meeting, Wednesday, Dec. 5, by Marjorie Smith, board member. The meeting was held at 5 o'clock in Ellen Smith hall.

"In 1918," Miss Smith said, "there was but one women's organization on the campus, the 'Girls Club.' It was as a 'Senior Advisory' committee of this organization that the Big Sister board first originated, she went on to tell the girls. It had as its aim: 'To promote true friendship on the campus and to forever do away with loneliness among freshmen.'"

In 1925 the advisory committee became an independent organization and Mrs. Beechly, a Lincoln resident, was its first president. Since then the Big Sister board, as it was named, has been growing and expanding its work each year, Miss Smith stated.

Jane Barbour, freshman A. W. S. president, conducted the business meeting which preceded the talk. A notification committee was appointed at this time whose duty it will be to notify girls of meetings, subjects, and dates. SCHEME CHOSEN FOR PRESENTING COLONEL AT BALL

Plan Selected Is Essence of Several Ideas; Norman Hansen's Nearest.

TWO PRACTICES HELD

Officers Procure Appropriate Favors for Dates to Opening Formal.

Involving a combination of several schemes submitted, the presentation ceremony for the 1934 Military Ball, to be held Friday night, has been selected by the military department. The plan which most nearly approximates the final arrangement was entered by Norman Hansen, assistant instructor in architecture in the university.

Work on the ceremony, in which the new honorary colonel will be presented, is nearly complete, according to word received from the committee in charge, and the first rehearsal was conducted Wednesday night. A final practice session is scheduled for 7 this evening. In accordance with a long standing ban against corsages set up by the administrative authorities, student officers of the R. O. T. C. have selected favors of appropriate military significance to give their dates for the ball, it was stated. The full identity of the favors will remain a secret, however, until Friday night.

A crowd of approximately 5,000 is expected by Cadet Major Henry Kosman, manager of the ticket sales, according to indications shown by advance sales. Fifteen hundred couples on the dance floor and 2,000 balcony spectators are indicated. NEBRASKAN URGES STUDENTS TO SUBMIT CLOTHING FOR NEEDY

Discarded Apparel May Be Taken to Basement of U Hall.

Opening its relief campaign, the Daily Nebraskan together with the University Y. W. C. A. today urged all students to contribute clothing for the aid of the needy families in Lincoln.

All persons having discarded or outgrown apparel are asked to take it to the Daily Nebraskan office, the Y. W. C. A. rooms in the Temple building, or the Y. W. C. A. office at Ellen Smith hall.

Freshman commission groups at the Y. W. will mend the clothing and make it ready for distribution. Two girls from each group will then obtain names of families in need from the community chest, and with a social worker, will visit the families. In this way each family will receive clothing to fit its individual needs.

Miss Amanda Heppner, dean of women, gave her hearty approval of the endeavor and wished the sponsors a great deal of success in the drive.

Elaine Fontein, president of the Y. W. C. A. stated, "I hope that everyone will cooperate and bring clothing to one of the three stations."

It was stated earlier in the week by Dick Schmidt, in charge of the Daily Nebraskan's end of the drive, that some responsible person should be appointed by each house to take care of that group's part in the campaign. "It will be the duty of that person to see that the donations are collected and brought to one of the receiving stations. An honor roll, including names of organized houses donating the clothes, is to be published in the Daily Nebraskan.

ORIGINS MODERN LITERATURE TOPIC ASSEMBLY TODAY

Bernard Fay Will Speak at Convocation in Temple This Morning.

PROGRAM BEGINS AT 11

Unique Works of Gertrude Stein and Others Will Be Discussed.

Relating the origins of modernistic literature, Prof. Bernard Fay of the College de France will appear in the second university general convocation of the year at the Temple theater Thursday morning at 11 o'clock.

The unique works of the modern writer, Gertrude Stein, will be discussed by Professor Fay who for many years has been an intimate friend of the author. A recently published article of Professor Fay's appearing in the Saturday Review of Literature concerns this author. The achievements of other modern writers, Sherwood Anderson, Joyce, Valery, Proust, and Gide, will be analyzed by the speaker.

Professor Fay is known to Americans thru his famous biography, "Franklin, the Apostle of Modern Times," and through his many magazine articles. He is a versatile writer on both political and literary subjects. He has also written: "The American Experiment" and "George Washington, Republican Aristocrat."

The speaker will explain the start of the era of modernistic writing with particular emphasis on the period in America and France since 1860.

Educated at the University of Paris, Professor Fay received his Doctor of Letters from that school. During the war he served with the French army, and as liaison officer with the American army, and was twice decorated for valor, receiving the Croix de Guerre, and Croix de Leopold II.

AGANS GIVES TALK ON 'STUDENT, NEXT WAR'

Philosophy Instructor Talks At Meeting of Peace Organization.

Pointing out why students are and should be interested in war and the three different parts that students can play in case war should be declared, Gerald Agans, instructor in the philosophy department, spoke to members of the peace organization Wednesday evening in the Temple on the subject, "The Student and the Next War."

"One may take one of three attitudes when war is declared," stated Agans, "the may be a conscientious objector, in other words, a do-nothing; he may fight to save the world for democracy; or he may present organized resistance."

According to Mr. Agans, there is one way in which students may show their interest in the avoidance of war, that is by presenting their views as more than individuals. This can be accomplished by presenting organized opinion.

"Students represent a higher level of learning, better opinions, and a greater interest in the present day problems," continued Agans, "Hence it is essential that the student body display its interest in promoting peace."

Agans added that it was not enough for believers to show their belief merely by means of the ballot box. They must also demonstrate their attitudes through the press, for it is only by majorities of public opinion that any plan reaches beyond private interest.

"In other words, we must stand together for a common purpose that we may erase war from the face of the earth," he stated in conclusion.

Morse Hazelrigg presided over the meeting and a discussion followed the speech. The next meeting will be held one week from next Wednesday.

Specimens Birds, Beasts, Fish From University Museum Now Residing at Nebraska City in School for Blind

BY REGINA HUNKINS. "We want to 'see' the animals!" Little boys and girls from the School for the Blind represent the most enthusiastic of all Morrill hall visitors. With eager hands they "see" the specimens, noting each detail thru the sense of touch; and now the animals are their own. Bears, birds, and fish have been sent to Nebraska City, where they now reside in their respective cages in the School for the Blind. This is the latest of the university's contributions to the field of learning—education by the touch system. "Feeling is believing." Dr. E. H. Barbour, director of the museum, recalls with pleasure the delight of the children in their numerous visits to Morrill hall. "They are so eager to learn, and their little fingers are so sensitive to their surroundings. They never break or harm even the most delicate specimens," he said.

A letter from Ned Abbott, president of the School for the Blind at Nebraska City, says that the specimens sent by the university are not only giving the children a great deal of enjoyment but that they are also aiding immensely in the educational work. Cases have been built for the articles, and each specimen has its own parking (Continued on Page 2.)
