

CAMPUSOCIETY

WHISPERING, ELECTIONEERING, anxious faces—you're right—there is just about to be another election. This time it's the girls in Ellen Smith who are conducting it and it's all about who will be the Y. W. C. A. officers next semester. Once again we'll have a chance to see the Mortar Board resolution against politics in effect. The candidates are all prominent girls on the campus who have a long list of "Y" and other activities behind them and one, besides worried candidates there are those anxious girls who would like other offices in the "Y"—officers have quite a bit to say about that you know. Any way you look at it Wednesday, which is election day, will hold a long and crucial eight hours for those girls who spend most of their time in Ellen Smith and the relief of knowing the outcome will be pleasant even to the defeated candidates.

Perpetrated by the faculty of the Law College and the psychology department, the stunt involved the "shooting" of Hugh Wyland, Lawrence Ely and Harry Foster by Roy Hackman, graduate psychology student. The story was awarded first prize for features during the past year by the department of journalism at the last journalism college banquet.

The panoramic scene of a football crowd, complete with knotholders, sightseers, buses of Boy Scouts, and "folks from home" was pictured in description of the campus on the day of the Iowa game. bringing beverages to hordes of invaders. And from a shiny sedan floated the query, "Anne, would you care for olives?" from penny-wise spectators-to-be. "Watch fobs with silver or pearl initials. . . Be ready for the holidays—get your new suits and pants now. . . Sorel neckwear and other furnishings. . . When in doubt, buy slippers. . . With these timely suggestions in their advertisements, the holiday numbers of the 1934 Daily Nebraskan prepared for Christmas. The feature, which appeared this December, even listed the ad "New Pool Parlor: All students are cordially invited to while away time here. . . My idea of a perfect library would be in a building which inspires a student entering it, and whose reading room is comfortable and homelike, with davenport, footstools a damps, instead of the conventional row of tables with three chairs on each side." This is the university librarian, Gilbert Doane, speaking to the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors. In this feature which appeared last February, now made timely by the recent library report of the university senate, Mr. Doane urged that libraries be made more attractive. He cited the case of Michigan, where students were turned away on Saturdays and Sundays for lack of room when they made their bookshelves interesting. Little known facts of Nebraska's campus studio, a small bit of Hollywood hidden among greenhouses and engineering shops, were described in a feature that appeared in November. Work in the department ranges from portrait photography to microphotography, under the direction of Richard Hufnagle.

"Not just a set of business transactions but a work of art, a classic," is the manner in which Chancellor Emeritus M. Avery describes James Stuart Dales' method of recording university transactions while secretary to the board of regents. From 1875 to 1933, Mr. Dales kept a complete record of the university's business in some twenty clothbound, leather backed volumes. After retiring in 1933, he received an honorary doctor of laws degree from the university, when this feature appeared in the Nebraskan.

Wisconsin Prom King Vanishes on Eve of Coronation

From the Daily Cardinal. The prom king vanished—and 800 dancers who assembled in the great hall of Memorial Union last night wondered whether it was a great publicity fraud or whether it was the McCoy.

When Virginia Wheary was introduced as Dick Brazeau's queen last night, Dick Brazeau failed to put in his appearance, and furthermore, he failed to put in his appearance before the evening was over.

No Publicity, Claim. It was discovered that Brazeau had eaten dinner at the Psi Upsilon house, but that after dinner he had disappeared, and had seen no one since that time—so everyone says.

Harold Judell, Harvey Leiser, Robert Musser, and Jack Ryan, all close friends of Brazeau and members of the junior class president's political machine, all professed their ignorance of any publicity stunt.

What? No Graveyard? "He ate dinner at the house, but after he left he did not return and I haven't seen him since," Ryan said. Many of Brazeau's friends said that the prom king really might have been "kidnaped," as he had failed to pass out the patronage as had been expected.

"You guys aren't the only ones in the junior class," said the note that was delivered to Harvey Leiser, co-chairman of the pre-prom. Leiser claims that he has no idea as to Brazeau's whereabouts, and that the last time that he had seen the leader of the junior class directorate Brazeau had expressed every intention of being present at the dance.

At any event, it was discovered that Brazeau really had failed to pass out the political plums as had been expected—but it was also known that the whole program needed publicity, favorable or otherwise, and that there were several men on the publicity committee who had already been known for their originality.
