The Poor Athlete.

PITY the poor would-be college athlete. His brain is probably in a whirl as he surveys the nation's football camps and tries to decide to which school he will offer his sterling services. In view of the conflicting attitudes taken by different sections of the country on subsidization of athletes, the poor fellow doesn't just know what the score is.

The west coast conferences come out with a declaration against subsidization of athletes; the east seems to be somewhat in favor of it and Jock Sutherland makes a flat statement defending the practice; other schools are non-committal. Now the latest move in this game of "Who gets the athlete?" is made by the University of Michigan.

The interfraternity council at that school recently suggested to its member fraternities that each hold at least one board job open in the house to accommodate an athlete, preferably a freshman. This is in effect just a polite way of saying that the school is in the market for good gridiron material.

The only unfair aspect of this act is the fact that it may burden the fraternities which already are having a hard time in their struggle with Old Man Economy. Of course, maybe the houses are glad to be assigned an athlete, since a letter man in the chapter is always a good rushing point.

What puzzles one about the whole business is the seriousness with which charges and denials of subsidization and payment of athletes are made. Nominally, of course, university football athletes are supposed to be Simon pure amateurs, implying that they receive no financial help, directly or indirectly, for their services to the school in an athletic way. Considering this, then, it may be supposed that a charge of paying an athlete is serious.

Included, however, in the Simon pure list are the golfers, the tennis sharks, the swimmers, and all the others who supposedly receive no pay for their exhibitions of skill. They are, however, rewarded with soft jobs, traveling expenses, and other items that go to make up a nice compensation for the time and energy expended.

It seems, then, that all this agitation about professionalization of college sports is a bit ridiculous. Great athletes undoubtedly render service to the school for which they play and in return receive little enough. Why should the schools assume a sanctimonious attitude and fool themselves into thinking that amateurs are really Simon pure?

Determination and Self Confidence.

SENIORS at Purdue university were recently told that determination and self confidence were two of the most important qualifications for the job hunting college graduate. These words, coming after four discouraging years, probably fell to a great extent on rocky ground.

There are a few old timers who can remember far enough in the past to tell of the time when all that a college graduate had to do in order to get a position was to flash his diploma under the nose of the prospective employer. These old timers, however, are few and their memories of that heyday have been obscured by the passage of time.

Determination is rather a difficult quality to grasp. It is even more difficult to maintain that grasp in the face of almost overwhelming odds. And as application after application is met with "nothing right now" the fire of determination is slowly but surely quenched.

Self confidence, necessary in order to sell one's self to the business world, is equally difficult to retain. As the student goes through school and witnesses preceding classes graduate and fail in attempts to gain positions, he begins to wonder if after all, there is any point to his continuing the struggle. Self confidence flies out the window as fear and finally lethargy come in the front door.

Contemporary Comment

Saving the Nation From Youth.

Despite the gallant and much publicized protest of the Vassar student body, the Nunan bill was passed by the New York senate Monday evening. It now goes to the assembly.

The bill is one of the many being raised in the legislatures of the country against "subversive forces." Specifically, it requires that every student entering an institution of higher learning, supported in whole or in part by public funds, be required to take allegiance oaths to the state and federal constitutions.

One might think that the specter of revolution was walking abroad in our land to hear our legislators wail. Mr. Hearst has shown them what well may happen, according to him, in this land of freedom. He alternates the most startling disclosures of revolutionary plots on the nation's camp with pictures of hunger-starved wretches in Russia. His is an effective art. More and more of our state law-makers are singing the burden of his refrain. The debate in Albany Monday evening showed this only too clearly. A Brooklyn senator, Edward J. Coughlin—the name itself breathes patriotism in these latter days—accused all who spoke against the bill of lack of loyalty. Speaking of the Vassar protest, Senator Field of New York made the most intelligent remark of the week. "It's too bad we can't get the better of him. He must keep up his courage and confidence despite all tendencies to mutter, 'What's the use?' There are few jobs open and they will go to the men and women who can prove to the employer that their spirits have not been broken by adverse circumstances."

Soil and Water Conservation.

THE clouds of dust which blanketed the city Wednesday and kept everyone gritting their teeth is another forceful reminder to the state that something must be done, and done soon, about soil and water conservation.

Tons of valuable top soil have been carried off by the vagaries of the wind during the past few weeks. Winter crops have literally been blown out of the ground. Last summer's drought proved that Nebraska's water supply as now provided for, or rather, not provided for, is inadequate to take care of demands in time of an emergency.

Much research and work along the line of combatting these fits of temperament by the weather have been carried on lately by the university department of conservation and survey. Other work has been done under federal projects.

It is vitally important for all Nebraskans, students as well as those who are in the thick of the battle, to realize what is happening to their fertile acres. The ravages of Mother Nature must be checked. Those now in school might well devote much thought to this problem that will confront them as they leave college and go back to their homes.

STUDENT PULSE

Brief, concise contributions pertinent to matters of student life and the university are welcomed by this department under the heading of "Student Pulse." Items of practical value which excludes all libelous matter and personal attacks. Letters must be signed, but names will be withheld from publication if so desired.

Contributions should be limited to a maximum of five hundred words in length.

Senior Is Enthusiastic.

TO THE EDITOR:

WHEN I first read in the Daily Nebraskan that a movement had been started for organization of the senior class I, probably like many others, laughed a few choice laughs. As the committee appointed to take charge of the work progresses with its plans, however, I am becoming an enthusiastic backer of the movement.

The committee, contrary to the usual custom on the Nebraska campus, has really settled down to work and seems to be evolving something definite to offer the senior class. According to stories in the Daily Nebraskan, the first step in the organization work is the informal dance which is to be held Friday. What plans for the future are I do not know, but if the committee continues on its present road, it should work out something effective.

From what I have been able to pick up around the campus, the class as a whole seems to be getting behind the program. The chief point of apprehension at the present time seems to be the asinine contention that a "tea dance" is sort of a sissy affair and consequently many are doubtful about attending.

This sort of view disgusts me. Just because such an affair is rather new on the campus, there is no reason to be afraid of it before it is tried out. I attended the recent tea dance held by the Sponsors club for advanced R. O. T. C. students and it was one of the best informal parties held this year.

If the senior class will only realize that the committee is honestly attempting to help the school, I believe they will fall behind the program 100 percent. At least, they should.

A SENIOR.

Consider the Grasshoppers.

TO THE EDITOR:

I WRITE this as a plea to self respect. It is supposed to be in defense of Nebraska coeds. Usually these said coeds would rate pretty high in a beauty market, but let us observe them running about the campus during gym classes. They very closely resemble unlovely grasshoppers.

During the Victorian era I imagine the green clad maidens would have been very stylish. Evidently university officials are not aware that this is not the Victorian era.

But even the offending rompers are not enough. For outdoor sports the poor girls must add a skirt to further entangle them in their athletic endeavors. And to top it all off, they must wear full length stockings. Evidently bare legs are still in the unmentionable category. Why don't our basketball players over at the coliseum wear boots and breeches and be done with it?

Once I tried to get around the regulations. I said I didn't have any stockings. Then I said I had no money to buy them. But I bought some. I needed physical education credit.

Finally, are Nebraska coeds going to continue to be grasshoppers forever?

get at the professors," he said.

"They are the root of the evil."

Our "patriotic" statesmen are carrying on the fight to save America from criticism and free discussion. According to them the greatest curse of modern days is thought, and they are going to put a stop to it. They have already realized their objective in the New York senate; it remains for them to destroy the "evil" in the assembly. One can rest assured that if they succeed, their influence will cross into this state. When the Daughters of the American Revolution introduced the teacher's oath bill in the New Jersey assembly, the measure was copied almost word for word from a recent New York bill. We may soon see a replica of the Nunan bill in our own legislative chambers. Eastern colleges may be driven from the "dreadful curse of academic freedom." At least, our lawmakers are trying hard to save America from youth.

More on Professors.

The investigation made recently by the Daily of what students really think of their professors started off echoing reverberations throughout the contemporary collegiate press. Some of the student papers, a bit contemptuous, titled their editorials "What? That Again?" Others wondered why such a survey would uncover on their own campuses. A few others hitched up their galoshes and tried to lay out the qualifications that made up a good teacher. The Daily Maroon of the University of Chicago laid down seven sensible requirements:

1. He must be thoroughly humane, which means he must have a sympathetic understanding of the human personality, and must bear in mind that his responsibility is not to subjects but to human beings.
2. He must be a teacher, not a taskmaster.
3. His purpose must be to develop, not to indoctrinate.
4. He must have knowledge, not only information.
5. He must be educated, he must see his specialty in the light of knowledge as a whole. A teacher who has no interest in subjects other than his own, or tends to be little other subjects, is an ignoramus and a menace to students.

6. He must be intelligent, he must be imbued with a zeal for growing in knowledge.

7. As far as possible we must not feed his students with rehashed mental food, but strive to send them to the springs of knowledge, to the great minds of the ages, thru whom they might be inspired with the spirit of knowledge, the spirit of searching and investigating.—The Minnesota Daily.
