NEBRASKA FARMER ACCEPTS STORY BY GRADUATE STUDENT

Bernice Clark Sells Tale About Farm Girl Cured Of Lying.

A short story by Miss Bernice Clark, graduate student in English and journalism from Elgin, has been accepted by the Nebraska Farmer for publication within the near future, according to word received Thursday by Dr. L. C. Wimberly, professor of English.

The story, entitled "Broken Eggs" was written last semester while Miss Clark was a student in the literary composition class of Dr. Wimberly, a course which is offered for the study of advanced composition.

The Nebraska Farmer publishes only a small amount of fiction, but the editors of the magazine thought the story to be of unusual interest and merit and would appeal to their readers. Miss Clark has received a check from the Nebraska Farmer for the use of her story, which is the first she has had published.

"Broken Eggs" is a short story with a rural background, and the plot of the story centers around a farm girl who is cured of lying.

Miss Clark received her bachelor of arts degree at the close of the last semester from the college of arts and sciences, she having taken a major in English and journalism. At the present time she is taking work in the graduate college.

Dr. Wimberly stated Thursday that Miss Clark was a member of the same class for which Dwight Perkins wrote "A. W. Voding vs. Claus Co." which was published in a recent issue of the Prairie Schooner, and which is soon to be reprinted in the Fiction Parade magazine. Dr. Wimberly reports that he has received a number of letters of favorable comment on the story from all parts of the United States.

SENIORS DISCUSS PLANS FOR PROM, PICNIC, CLASS DAY

Group Considers Suggestions For Several Affairs Thursday.

Suggestions for several major class events were considered by seniors who met in Social Science auditorium Thursday evening. Included in the plans discussed were a senior banquet, a senior prom, a class picnic, and a senior day.

Despite the comparatively small attendance at the meeting, those present showed considerable interest in the ideas which were presented, and a motion was passed to have the senior committee, with possible additions, look into the possibilities to be found in the plans that were outlined. It was decided that it would be advisable, if interest is to be kept alive, to arrange for some activity both in April and in May.

It was suggested that a day be set aside on which the seniors will attend school in hard times or hobnob costumes and will devote part of the day to a picnic or some such activity. That day would be held sometime in April. During the month of May, the seniors thought they might plan a class banquet and a prom.

Herman Rosenblatt, a member of the senior committee, suggested that the student council be asked to take steps to incorporate certain senior affairs on the university calendar and to designate the accomplishment of those events as definite duties which the senior class president must perform. This is to insure organization of future classes.

"We are rather breaking the trail," stated Jack Fischer, a committee member, at the meeting. "We can't expect a full measure of success, but we can go far enough to have done something constructive for later groups and to have experienced some measure of success ourselves."

Miss Stowell played as her concluding group of numbers, "Prephet Bird" by Schumann, "Claire de lune" by Debussy and "Etude, C minor, Op. 10, No. 12," and "Ballade, A flat, Op. 47," both by Chopin. Wilgus Eberly played the accompaniments.

STUDENT COUNCIL COMMITTEE MAPS CALIFORNIA PLAN

Virginia Selleck Outlines Second Student Book Store Setup.

GROUP STUDIES 50 PLANS

Pacific College Store Pays Fifty Per Cent on All Resales.

Offering a second outstanding plan of a university second hand bookstore for the consideration of the student body, the special Student Council committee campaign forged ahead today in outlining a practical plan to establish a similar institution on the Nebraska campus.

Setup of the bookstore at the University of Southern California was revealed today by committee chairman Virginia Selleck, who urged students to study the plans submitted to determine the one best fitted to the local campus, so that immediate action can be taken toward its establishment.

At the California school, the official campus bookstore is backed financially by the university, and all profit from the business is deposited into an all-university fund for a student union building and gymnasium. The store is operated by one full time manager and eight full time clerks, with over fifteen students working at part time jobs.

Set Established Rates.

All second hand books are resold to students at three-fourths of their purchase price and any book may be sold to the bookstore for one-half of its purchase price in cash, no matter how many times it has been resold. In case the book is badly worn, a small rebinding charge is deducted from the price.
