Lanoue Shifted to Halfback Post; Howell Calls Signals.

Nebraska fans will get their last glimpse of next fall's *Husker football machinery this Saturday, provided the weather prophets suffer a change of heart and furnish an order of sunshine a little more suited for grid-iron antics on the Memorial stadium lawn. With the exception of tice turf Monday, spring showers have forced the Crimson pigskin handlers to spend their last week of early season training inside the stadium basement. Tuesday's incheckups on the dirt arena under

According to Coach Bible, if continued showers make the contest impossible, the spring op-erations will close Saturday with play assignments. usual midweek practice has already been prevented by the con-

A couple of white clad backs promise to stage a hot contest for VNAFFILIATED GROUPS back berths, Jack Dodd, versatile Gothenburg athlete, and Harris Andrews, Beatrice punting ace, setting up a mighty bid for the starting honor. Dodd has led the White attack all season and has performed brilliantly on the Crimson squad, while Andrews has handled the White punting assignment with nothing to be desired. Henry "Chief" Bauer and Allan

Turner, varsity quarterbacks last year, will find plenty of competition awaiting them in the impressive showings of Johnnie Howell, Omaha field general, who opens his first year of competition next fall, and Art Ball, Fremont, allstate performer. Howell leads the entire passing attack, is a fine blocker, and a fair punter. Ball is developing into an elusive broken field runner and possesses a mean kicking and passing ability. Battle Looms at Fullback.

The fullback post looks like a three way varsity battle between Harold Brill, Norton, Kas.: Ron Douglas, Crete, and Sam Francis, Oberlin, Kas., with Marvin Plock, Lincoln back, leading the White shirted candidates. The Kansas flash, a fine passer and kicker, charges through the line and pivots in the open field with all the ease of a veteran. Marv Plock swept the end to set the Red Shirts on their heels several times last Saturday, and has plenty of speed in running back punts.
