AG INSTRUCTORS ELECT ROBERT WEIR AS HEAD

Discusses Farm Credit. Discussing the wise use of farm credit, Dr. Silcox said, "Conservatism in times of inflated prices, and the use of credit only for production purposes will save many young men from the struggle encountered by their fathers during the past fifteen years. Agricultural education has neglected the teaching of the prudent use of farm credit," he declared.

Dr. Silcox asked instructors to teach farm boys the importance of credit as related to price levels, sale, and land values. He emphasized the importance of the age and education of the borrower, and advised that all sources of farm credit should be investigated for reliance upon those which granted credit to fit agricultural needs.

Reed Gives Talk. Dr. A. A. Reed, director of extension at the university, preceded Dr. Silcox. His discussion concerned college entrance requirements and vocational agriculture. J. H. Pearson, regional agent for agricultural education, and C. C. Winteer, teacher trainer of vocational education at the university, directed a panel discussion on the problems of the part time school for farm boys.

Concluding the morning program was E. B. Engle of the United States soil erosion service at Albia. His address was illustrated and concerned the soil erosion problems of Nebraska. He pointed out that some 25,000 square miles of Nebraska land is subject to the possible severe soil erosion, with more than a million acres now destroyed by gullying. The Nebraska project is one of forty in the United States, he said, to plan a complete erosion program.

Land Planning Discussed. T. S. Thorfinnson, regional land planning consultant, spoke at 2:30 Friday afternoon on the land planning and purchase activities of the federal government. He described the research phase of the land program as seeking to find what was wrong, then finding the remedies. After that, he declared, action would be taken to improve. Questions confronting the land research men include the conservation of soil, Mr. Thorfinnson indicated. Others were on a proper balance between production and food and export needs; the increase of farm acreage; and the relation of human resources to land resources.

Walker Speaks in Afternoon. Clyde Walker of the department of agricultural engineering at Oregon State college, and former graduate of Nebraska, was on the afternoon program. He described the program of vocational agriculture in Oregon.

A panel discussion led by F. E. Mussehl and J. R. Redditt of the university department of poultry husbandry was concerned with "Turkey Projects for Vocational Agriculture."

Members of the university staff participating in the round table discussion Saturday morning were C. W. Smith, professor of agricultural engineering; C. A. Penton, W. J. Runnals, and L. W. Hurlburt, instructors of agricultural engineering.

CHANCELLOR EXPLAINS FACULTY PENSION PLAN

Arrangement Will Reduce Service Along With Salary Cut.

The University of Nebraska faculty retirement plan which the board of regents decided to put into effect starting Sept. 1, 1936, is an addition to the retirement plan used during past years, according to Chancellor E. A. Burnett.

"More generous plans for retirement have been instituted in other universities than the one recently approved by the regents for this state," Burnett explained.

The Nebraska plan is to reduce the amount of service required of each faculty member with a corresponding reduction in salary. This decline in salary shall not exceed fifty percent of their average salary during the last five year period. The head of the department and dean of the college concerned will determine the amount of service required in these cases.

Four Eligible Next Year.

On the first retirement date next year there will probably be four persons eligible for retirement, the chancellor noted. The age at which retirement will become effective is arranged to gradually decline each year until in 1941 it reaches 70 years.

Faculty members eligible for retirement may be retained by annual reappointments for several years when the continuance of such members in service is recognized for the betterment of the school, one of the points in the regents plan says. Teachers who have served twenty-five years but have not reached the minimum age may be retired on a plea of failing health or other disability.

A generous clause in the pension system permits those who have never been promoted beyond instructors to secure retirement benefits. Another provision gives those who have served twenty-five years and have reached the age of sixty-five the privilege of applying for retirement. The number to be granted benefits at this age will be limited by the discretion of the board of regents.

750 STUDENTS DANCE AT COLISEUM FRIDAY

Lantz Predicts Remainder Summer Program Will Be Successful.

A record breaking crowd attended the first coliseum dance of the summer Friday, June 21. Nearly 750 were present to dance to the music of Dave Haun and his orchestra, exceeding by at least 200 any other "first party" of a summer session. A new loud speaker address system amplified the sound of the music, making it possible to dance in every corner of the room. Especially remarkable was the size of this first crowd since there was almost no advertising of the dance. Both winter university students and summer students formed the bulk of those who were in attendance.

Judging from this party, an especially successful program of summer dances is predicted, according to Prof. E. W. Lantz, director of the recreation program.
