McKelvie, former governor ando-member of the federal farm board PARTICIPANTS IN under Hoover, opened the convocation with a fifteen minute speech in which he enumerated demo-cratic campaign promises and pointed out the ways in which they have broken them. He accused the New Deal of spending as much money in three years as had been spent by the government in the preceding 127 years.

"The administration is spending two dollars for every one that is taken in," he declared. "What does the New Deal's regimentation and greater taxes hold out in promise to the young man and woman?" Clark Speaks.

The republican speaker was fol-lowed by L. C. Clark, democratic county committee chairman, who in the same alloted time explained New Deal theories. He declared that the New Deal change the philosophy employed by republican regimes and tried to make the poor man prosperous because the man in big business can take care of himself.

Attempting to refute Mr. Mc-Kelvie's assertions, Clark assured day, Dec. 6 at 5 oclock. Clark replied that the loaning to the average man instead of the companies would have saved them because policyholders would then have been able to pay premiums.

Elizabeth Bushee, senior from Lincoln, took a shot at the republican party by asking McKelvic, What are some of the constructive things that you and your colleagues would have done had they been in power for the past few years?

McKelvie Replys.

"The most constructive thing we could have done would have been not to do the things they of the six curtain performances done, McKelvie retorted. Others of this nature are: "A Bit are sowing taxpayers of Magic"-Dairy Manufacturing money and no one will pay more than you will in your lifetime.' In reply to a challenge by Irving

Hill to his assertion that a dictatorship exists in this country, Mc-Kelvie stated that the most absolute dictatorship is the most insidious because it is the one that gets in when you aren't looking. Bill Marsh, council member in charge of convocations, stated he was pleased at the success of the forum and announced that the second forum would be held soon

BLUE PRINT TO HAVE ALUMNI DIRECTORY

Engineering Magazine for December on Campus Tuesday.

Nebraska Blue Print in its De-cember issue appearing Tuesday, Dec. 10 will contain the names and addresses of all the living engi-neering alumni who have been graduated from the college since the early 80's. Over 2,200 names will appear in the student engi-neering publication, Ted Schroed-

The directory is complete and names all the alumni of which the college has any record, the editor said. The Blue Print printed the last alumni directory, which is presented periodically, in 1931. A subscription campaign is now being conducted among all the en-gineering graduates, and the re-turns to date have been very good.

Schroeder pointed out.

In addition to the directory, the publication will contain the article, "Engineering, Economics or Psy-chology" by C. B. Lewis, research engineer at Ag college. The writer considers which of three factors are the most important in influ-encing rural electrification.
