SCARLET FAVORED LICK NORTHERNERS

Twelve Men Leave Tonight for Tilt on Minneapolis Maples Friday; Minnesota Loss to Carleton Raises Victory Hopes in Husker Line.

TEAMWORK, FIGHT BEATS BRIGHAM YOUNG

Coach Browne Plans Capitalize on Squad's Spirit to Revenge Viking's Football Triumph; West Coast Trip Follows Return Home.

Coach Harold Browne's Cornhusker basketball team, after thrilling an opening game crowd to its fingertips Tuesday evening as it trounced Brigham Young university 53-34, goes in quest of other laurels this evening. The Husker squad, consisting of twelve players, takes off tonight at 7 o'clock for Minneapolis, where it tackles Minnesota's Gophers Friday evening.

The Scarlet twelve-man roster is as follows: Forwards: Robert Leacock, Howard Baker, George Wahlquist, Leonard Hale, Henry Whitaker and George Scott. Centers: Lawrence Nelson and Floyd Ebaugh. Guards: Harv Widman, Robert Parsons, Paul Amen, Elmer Dohrmann.

Back Saturday. Arriving home Saturday afternoon, the Huskers will disassemble for a brief vacation at home and will assemble back in Lincoln on Dec. 25. The squad will be cut to ten men, and will start off on the first leg of its holiday journey to the west coast immediately. The jaunt includes games with Brigham Young university, University of Utah, and University of Wyoming on the outward trip, with Stanford university and St. Mary's college on the coast, and with the University of Denver on the return voyage.

Revenge Looked For. After the glittering attack which Browne's lads turned loose against Brigham Young university—an attack superior to any that's been observed in the Scarlet and Cream environment for quite some time—Nebraskans are sitting up in their chairs, wondering if it wouldn't be possible for something to happen that Nebraska has dreamed of for the better part of a decade.

As vengeance for what happened on that practically historic afternoon of Oct. 12 last fall, Cornhuskers are hoping, praying that Nebraska's basketball team can accomplish what Nebraska's football team failed to do—lick Minnesota. After the Husker style show of speed and class Tuesday evening, and after Minnesota succumbed to little Carleton college recently, it looks very much as tho that dream will come true Friday night.

Remember Minnesota? It isn't wise to start summarizing the success of the season or the capabilities of the players with only an opening game to go on. Cornhusker critics started doing that last fall... and got left. The Huskers possessed a strong football eleven. They almost got a trip to the Sugar Bowl... which they unquestionably deserved. But the folly of estimating how regularly opponents will fall before Nebraska's maple team becomes apparent when one observes the scores of the Minnesota and Kansas State games and reflects that the Huskers' 2-1 record picked the national champions only the Saturday or two before... which, incidentally, were the only two Saturdays elapsed in the season.

The season isn't over. There's got to be some additional proof that the Husker hoopers possess what it takes besides that thrilling victory turned in Tuesday evening. After a gradually improving position in the Big Six conference quotations under Coach Browne's regime, the Brigham Young tilt is liable to make over-eager critics jump the gun and conclude that the forthcoming

Five Events Scheduled For Intramural Splash

Here's the menu which Bill Horney hopes will draw forth a sizeable entry list for the fraternity swimming tournament at 7 o'clock this evening in the coliseum pool. The five events have been so selected that all entrants will have a chance at the crown, and so that no one individual can run off with high scoring honors.

The order of events: 200 yard free style relay (four men); 50 yard breast stroke; 50 yard free style; 150 yard medley relay (back, breast, and free style). No man may enter more than three events, although a number of men may compete on each team. Scoring will be as follows: Three places in free style relay, counting 8-5-3; three places in medley relay, counting 6-4-2; three places in individual events, counting 5-3-1.

Season is already played and decided in Nebraska's favor.

Nevertheless, the potential prowess which came to light in that opening tilt is far from displeasing. It's positively soul-astirring. It makes little wrinkles of pleasure curl around Browne's mouth as he thinks what will happen when his crew finally "arrives." They haven't arrived yet, but when they do, the rest of the conference is going to come in something like fifth in a four-horse race.

Know These Guys?

It's no use going over the capabilities of the men who are going to do such colossal things, if and when. It's no use saying that they've got a prospective center star and a long-range, impenetrable defensive guard in Floyd Ebaugh and Robert Parsons; that Hank Whitaker and George Wahlquist rattle the baskets till they wiggle with bombarding, accurate shots; and that Harv Widman, head man among the guards, and Bob Leacock rank alongside them all in ball-handling zip.

Such evaluations are, or should be, second-nature to everyone who cares about the Husker team. But there's one argument in favor of this fighting, fiery gang that calls for special attention. That's Browne's speedy passing attack.

There's strong suspicion floating around somewhere that the Nebraska team of last year didn't possess any too much in the way of team work. You'd be kicked out of the coliseum if you even so much as hinted at that this year. It will be hard to find a five-man unit that works together as one man like that Husker team of Tuesday evening. If that spirit holds up and Browne keeps those lightning passes hitting the right man at the right time—well, the Husker field house is going to be a mighty enjoyable place to spend a good share of the winter.

Teamwork Plus Fight.

But even that teamwork isn't the main forte of the Husker basket squad. The thing that distinguished those first six men in the first half of the B. Y. U. tilt as about the best Nebraska bet in a long time was their fight and drive. Every man on the team plunged in for all he was worth, both offensively and defensively. The effect of that scrappy determination showed itself when Brigham Young wondered what had happened to the ball she was passing about apparently free from danger a minute before. If both those features continue, there's little doubt that somebody's going to eat a lot of dust this season—and it won't be Nebraska!

VARSITY SWIMMING SQUAD REVEALED BY COACH JACK MINOR

Mentor Sees Winning Year Ahead With Lynde as Mainstay.

Prospects this year for the varsity swimming team look just as bright as they did last year at this time, according to Coach Jack Minor. The Jim Pixley and Smith will be missed this year, Coach Minor said that the squad as a whole compared very favorably with last year's, when the team was Big Six champion.

Meets will be held this year with Minnesota university, Kansas State college, Kansas university, Iowa State college, Grinnell college, and possibly Washington university. The dates of these meets are not definite. The Big Six conference meet will be held March 13 and 14.

Squad Named.

The varsity squad has been narrowed down to Glendon Lynde, Charles Mann, Bob Thornton, Richard Hagelin, Jack Barry, John Kraus, Douglas Dort, Ralph Ludwig, Kelvin Deming, Art Smith, Warren Calland, Harry Kuklin, Robinson Holbert and the Leask twins, Bill and Dick. Probably the outstanding performer on the squad is Glendon Lynde, who is present holder of the Big Six record in the 50, 100 and 220 yard free style. If Charles Mann keeps on developing, he will be able to replace Jim Pixley, champion of the 440 yard free style last year. Pixley is ineligible this year. Thornton excels in the breast stroke, as does Hagelin in the back stroke.

KAPPA DELTA'S WIN IN INTRAMURAL TOURNEY

Nebraska Ball Champions Defeat Carrie Belle Raymond Hall.

Kappa Delta's again took the intramural honors, when they defeated Carrie Belle Raymond Hall 15 to 7 and 15 to 8 and became Nebraska ball champions for 1935. Despite the rather one-sided score, both games were well played. The two teams did some excellent serving, and the ball was kept in play for long periods at a time.

From the starting whistle both sides were on their toes, and during the first part of the contest the markers remained practically even. Then Beth Taylor, Kappa Delta, took advantage of her position as server and added several needed points. Raymond Hall seemed unable to stave off the attack and the game ended 15 to 7. Evidently encouraged by their first encounter, the K. D.'s returned to their posts and chalked up eight markers before the loser's could find their bearings. Then play tightened up, and a hard fought battle was waged before the victors were able to make the fifteen points necessary to award them the championship.

300 SEE AG COLLEGE CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

Wesley Players Present 'On the Road to Egypt.'

Over 300 students and Lincoln people witnessed the annual Yuletide program sponsored by the agricultural college board, given Wednesday night in Student Activities building. Highlight of the evening was the presentation of a Christmas play, "On the Road to Egypt," by the Wesley players.

Elinor McCadden was chairman of the program with Vincent Jacobson as co-chairman, assisted by Eleanor Chase, Emma Mauch, Earl Heady, and Howard Petersen.
