An administrative ban of long standing was apparently relaxed last week when newspaper photographers were allowed to take pictures of a girls' swimming class in the coliseum pool.

It is either early or late for rushing anecdotes, but we can't resist the latest one to come to these frost-bitten ears. A rushee of doubtful desirability was put in charge of one of the boys for an afternoon date.

The proprietor of a local bowling alley told us recently that over 100 girls received regular bowling instruction on his alleys three times a week, and that it's a picnic to watch them.

The other day in Minneapolis, Oscar M. Hartzell, promoter of the famous Drake Estate swindle, listened to a judge defer his sentence on the grounds that he had been adjudged a paranoiac by a psychologist called into the case.

During his first trial an elderly couple were put on the stand for the prosecution. The man, a wrinkled, stooped old farmer, testified that he and his wife had invested $300—all they had outside of a small mortgaged acreage—in the scheme.

Hartzell and his associates took hundreds of thousands of dollars out of the middle-west— from credulous small town people and farmers, mostly—during the years of his operation, and even after his conviction, contributions continued to pour in to him for his defense.

Twenty candidates for Pershing Rifles tried out last night before Capt. John Brain and his staff. All competitors were tested and graded on efficiency in basic movements, manual of arms, and military courtesy.

INSTRUCTOR ONE NATION'S BUSY PROFESSIONAL MEN

Instead of being a lazy individual who sticks to the campus because "it's a nice, easy life" the average university professor is one of the nation's busiest professional men, says Northwestern university, where a little study has been made.

They found that the average day in work connected with his classes and research, delivered 4.8 lectures during the year, traveled 1,213 miles, wrote two articles for publication, published a fifth of a book, taught evening classes, gave radio speeches and served as official for some learned society.

Invitations Out For NSFA Meet

Council Asks Delegates of Midwest Colleges to Participate.

Invitations go out this week for student governing bodies of universities and colleges throughout the middle-west to send representatives to a regional convention of the National Student Federation of America to assemble in Lincoln on April 18 for a three day meeting for discussion of vital undergraduate problems.

The convention delegates will take up in round table discussions problems concerning positions and independence of the college press. They will consider position and cost of honorary societies, athletics and subsidization, academic freedom, and other matters which individual schools may propound.

Student leaders interested in the topics under discussion or who had experience in the particular field will lead the discussion.

Housing a Problem. The regional meeting will be one of the most important projects undertaken by Nebraska's student council this year.

Irving Hill, president of the student council, said that invitations would be sent to schools in Nebraska, Iowa, North and South Dakota, Missouri, Kansas, Minnesota and Oklahoma.

The invitations will be addressed to the heads of the student governing bodies and to the editor of the school paper. Each school, however, may send as many delegates as it wishes.

Suggestion for the convention was officially approved by the student council at its regular meeting Feb. 3. E. W. Lantz, sponsor of the governing body, expressed the highest commendation of the proposal. Further plans will be arranged at the council meeting today at 5 o'clock, said Marylyn Petersen, chairman of the committee in charge.

Large Group. The National Student Federation of America is the largest body of its kind in the country. It includes in its membership leading schools of the United States. Sponsors of the affair indicated, however, that they would request the attendance of non-members as well as members of the national organization. A total of eighty-nine schools are included in the invitation list.

Irving Hill and Mary Yoder attended the Foundation's national convention in Kansas City during the Christmas holidays. At that time they realized the need for a regional conference to solve the problems affecting schools in the midwest. Representation from a limited geographic area, they felt, should be of greater benefit to the participants.
