Forum or Against 'Em?

UNCEASING has been the war waged by two opposing groups on the subject of militarism. Yearly there is the cry of fear from the one that preparedness will ultimately lead to the capitulation of this country into another horrible war...

Tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in the Temple capable speakers representing these conflicting viewpoints will open the second student forum of the school year...

Dean T. J. Thompson has notified all the professors that they might excuse their classes if they so wish. It is the sincere hope of the Nebraskan that professors will cooperate in making this second student forum a success.

This is a student function. It is their party. Only twelve minutes will be allowed each of the main speakers. Two minutes is the maximum time limit placed upon student renditions.

There are few questions that can compare with the one selected for this particular forum. Bitter, intense and constant has been the action of both parties.

STUDENT PULSE

Brief, concise contributions pertinent to matters of student life and the university are welcomed by this department. Under the usual restrictions of sound newspaper practice, which excludes all libelous matter and personal attacks.

Student Reading. People generally read when they have nothing else to do. For the general public, reading is the chief intellectual stimulus.

as mental. After a day of this, what does he return home to at night? An evening of contentment, before a fireplace, with nothing to do but read? Quite the contrary. Lessons for tomorrow are due. Projects due within a week or so cannot be put off indefinitely.

Yet educators, clergy, and the general public continue to condemn the college student as an ignoramus on current affairs. They claim that college students as a class know less about world affairs than the average person outside of school.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT

Again—The 'Freedom Of the Press.'

One of the favorite topics for discussion when editors get together was given another airing at the meeting of the South Dakota Press association in Sioux Falls recently.

In this case, however, the attitude of the speaker toward the subject was so forthright and so sane and his points so well taken that they are worthy of more than the passing mention given them in the news story which appeared in last week's issue of The Auxiliary.

Expressing the belief that there is a strong political tinge to some of the charges that "the freedom of the press is in dire straits, is menaced seriously, immediately and in no mean way," Mr. Lusk declared:

When we are talking and fighting about some freedom of the press, I don't want to have even a thing so non-political and so important to me as the subject has degenerated to the suspicion that I want to look at it from an impersonal, purely factual viewpoint and I want to take my own stand on that basis.

What can be done about it? Apparently the answer lies within the profession itself. If we wish to retain our power, we must not abuse it.

In other words, Mr. Lusk checks the responsibility for maintaining press freedom right back to where it belongs—to the profession of journalism itself.

Until the public can be made to believe that freedom of the press is of importance to its welfare in government, the public will continue to be indifferent.

all-enforceable. And self-preservation is Nature's first law. Every struggle has had a natural basis. In human society men have had the instruments for natural movements.

On every hand we see the effects of man's violation of natural laws, and of his attempt to stave off the penalty of violation through institutional ties.

The world is on the brink of another armed struggle because the necessities of life have been withheld from thousands through the rigidity of institutional hoo-doo and prejudice; and Congress is endeavoring to set up a neutrality policy to keep the United States out of war.

Social co-operation in the distribution of life's necessities has worked in circumscribed localities from time to time. Through this same plan nations have attempted to build systems to care for the wants of those living within their boundaries.

To end wars the world will have to better co-operate during so-called times of peace. Tariff walls must fall; for we are living, economically speaking, with the Japanese these days.

INDIANA INSTALS SPEAKING BUREAU WITH 16 MEMBERS

Encouraged by the success of speaking groups at universities throughout the nation, the University of Indiana Division of Speech last night announced the organization of a Speakers' Bureau, consisting of 16 experienced student speakers who will be available immediately for speeches to civic organizations, high schools and educational groups in the state of Indiana.

The purpose of the bureau, as pointed out last night by Stanley Valinetz, '37, president of the group, is to afford speech students more opportunities to speak than they would obtain by merely being members of classes or dramatic societies.

A wide variety of possible topics for discussion already has been listed by the bureau. The students will talk on such subjects as child labor, disarmament, consumer's research, censorship of motion pictures, a 13-month calendar, the city manager type of government, socialized medicine and other subjects of nationwide interest.

Organizations also may engage two students to provide two debates, arguing opposite sides of a question, according to rules of the bureau.

ELEVEN ATHLETES MAKE IOWA STATE FALL HONOR ROLL

CALIFORNIANS VOTE BAN COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING

1. I am in favor of compulsory military training. 2. I am against compulsory military training. 3. I am against compulsory military training but am in favor of voluntary training.

On the last point on the ballot, 88 percent of those who voted against compulsory training, indicated that they were in favor of voluntary military training.

Two years ago two Methodist students refused to comply with the compulsory training regulation and were expelled from the university. They carried their case to the United States supreme court but it was thrown out because that body had no jurisdiction over the case.

A similar poll was held at Berkeley last month but less than a thousand students cast ballots, although it was declared "representative."

in the exchange of flour for sugar in the hill country. We can't encourage trade sharpers to indulge in neighborly throat cutting and expect peace to be the outcome.

Civilization has necessarily become more complex through the multiplication of mechanical inventions, and institutions, of which human legislation is a phase, have failed to meet its natural demands.

Already Too Many Students For Too Few Instructors.

"Figures don't lie," the old adage says. But sometimes they do not tell all the truth, either. Ever since the registration figure for the university has been playing around in the thousands, students, faculty, and others have watched the figures with interest, comparing them with those of former years and estimates of future years.

Individual enrollment for last year at this time was 7,607. The teaching staff for last year was made up of 387 faculty members of and above the rank of tutor.

Perhaps it is fortunate that enrollment of new students did drop, because with teaching facilities as they are students do not have the opportunities they would under more personal supervision.—The Daily Texan.

the Republican River Flood Area. The convocation will start at 7:30 in social science auditorium. Stated Schroeder, "This topic will be of interest to all engineer students, regardless of their departments. Members of the executive board join me in urging all engineers not to miss this event. If they have true professional interest, the auditorium should be well filled the night of the convocation."

TWO GERMAN SCHOOLS GIVE SUMMER TERM.

Munich, Weimar-Jena Universities Offer a Variety of Courses

To students who are interested in studying abroad, two German universities, the University of Munich and Weimar-Jena university, are offering summer courses in 1936. They will include lectures on the German language and literature, history, art, and music, courses in philosophy and pedagogics, visits to museums and art galleries, social arrangements and excursions.

The first session will last from July 4 to August 2 and the second session will last from August 15 to September 27. Anyone interested in this type of study may inquire at the German department for further information.

What Do YOU Think?

Are you in favor of totally abolishing Hell Week in Nebraska fraternities? Answer.

TED BRADLEY: I believe that hell week has a very definite and specific function. It can be overdone but I think it is conducted properly that it brings the actives and pledges closer together.

DON GLASS: I don't see any point in it and I can't see what good it is going to do me.

JOHN WACHTER: Yes, I think it should be abolished. I think it brings the pledges closer together but doesn't do any of them any good. I don't think the actives get any particular fun out of it because it is just as hard on them as it is on the pledges.

PETE HAGELIN: No, I think it is a good custom. It brings the fellows a lot closer together than they ever were before.

THURSTON PHELPS: It really doesn't make any difference to me. As far as doing any good it doesn't. It's a lot of fun tho, I suppose.

MAX MORN: It has its points but it should be modulated. I think that if it was completely abolished that there wouldn't be very much fraternity life.

BILL CLINE: I think it is a good thing. It is a period which shows the freshman how a fraternity is run.

VIC HERRMANN: I think there should be at least two or three days of hell week. I don't think any fraternity life would be complete without some experience like this during the freshman year. I think that hell week shows whether or not a fellow can "take it."

FILES FOR REGENCY

From The Lincoln Journal. Robert N. DeVoe, Lincoln attorney, filed early yesterday for election to the board of regents.

"Two things prompted me to take this action," declared DeVoe in a statement issued last night. "The first is a desire to do something for the school that has done so much for me. The second is to help maintain the university's sphere of usefulness in the life of the state."

"I am sincerely interested in the welfare and progress of the university and am deeply concerned with the efficient and economical management of the institution."
