

NEBRASKA CAMPUS SOCIAL WHIRL

NOW YOU KNOW WHO SHE IS.

With the final announcement in this publication of the new pledges to the various sororities, we feel sure that many of the cute new faces that so many of us have "seen around" and not been able to identify, will become less of a brain wracking consideration and more of a charming reality to those of us who want to know the latest campus news. At any rate we were finally able to get all of the midsemester dope that we have so far been unable to print, and today's society is just chock full of good news to aspiring campus Romeos.

SENATE SELECTS ALUMNI BOARD TO CONTROL GREEKS

Faculty Committee Names Members to Graduate Advisory Council.

Twelve of the fifteen members of the university senate committee on student organizations and social functions met Wednesday and selected seven members of the interfraternity alumni council to serve as the interfraternity board of control for the following two years. Of the seven alumni elected only one change was made from the previous board, that being the installation of Allen W. Field in the place of Burks Harley.

In accordance with constitution of the university the members are to be elected every two years from the alumni council composed of one representative of each fraternity. To complete the board two members of the student interfraternity council are elected for membership for a one year term.

volves spending of large amounts of money. If this money for these purposes were spent toward the amelioration of internal conditions instead of toward fighting forces it would bring security and peace of mind from external aggression. This is more especially true when on the other half of the Pacific there is a nation which has asked for arms party beyond its need.

Not even Phi Beta Kappa headquarters knows the official grip of that organization.

UNION TO CALL WAR STRIKE OF NATION'S COLLEGE STUDENTS

Joseph P. Lash, Secretary, Sets Demonstration Date April 22.

Students in colleges throughout the country will be called from their class rooms on April 22 to participate in the third student strike against war, Joseph P. Lash, executive secretary of the American Student Union, announced yesterday.

This year it is expected that 350,000 students, double last year's total, will respond to the call of the union, which was formed in December through a merger of the Student League for Industrial Democracy, the National Student League, and campus liberal and progressive groups.

To launch preparations for the strike, a conference of student leaders, representing various student organizations, college newspapers, and student councils, has been summoned for this Saturday at the offices of the union, Mr. Lash said.

At that time a preliminary call, embodying a statement of the origin and aims of the strike, will be drafted for submission to student leaders, prominent educators, civic groups and national leaders who will comprise the national strike committee.

"Passage of the unprecedented military budget has started a flood of inquiries to us from student groups and individuals who want to register their disapproval of the war program by joining in the strike," Mr. Lash asserted.

One of the major focal points of the strike, Mr. Lash said, will be opposition to the R. O. T. C. in the face of extensive formation of new units and the increased federal appropriation.

The official strike call is expected to go out one week after the conference of student leaders in New York this Saturday.

VASSAR PROFESSORS OPPOSE FAITH OATH

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y. (ASU) The Vassar chapter of the American Association of University Professors has adopted a resolution urging repeal of the Ives law which requires an "oath of allegiance" from teachers.

Prof. Alice Snyder of the English department will represent Vassar at a hearing before an assembly committee when the Kaminsky bill, providing repeal of the law, will be argued.

Meanwhile, a delegation of Vassar students is being organized by the American Student Union chapter there to journey to Albany in protest against the revival of the Numan student loyalty oath bill. It is expected that students from other colleges in the state will join in the delegation.

POLLY GELLATLY BACK FROM CHILDREN THEATER MEETING

Miss Polly Gellatly, founder and director of the Children's Play movement in the university, returned Saturday from Baltimore where she spent four days at a crazy in a big way, according to Miss Gellatly. The theaters themselves are small, seating about 1,600 on the average, less than the Liberty theater here in Lincoln. One show seats only 200. The size gives an intimate touch to plays and make the audience feel close to the actors.

In Chicago Miss Gellatly saw Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine in "Taming of the Shrew." The play, a Theatre Guild production, was given at the Erlanger theatre. The playhouse had been made to look Elizabethan, and late comers in the audience were elaborately hushed and whispered at from every side when they entered, just as in Elizabethan times.

Miss Gellatly was graduated from the University in 1925 and started teaching dramatics that September. She has produced since then 40 plays. Her biggest problem has been to find plays, good children's productions being very scarce, but of the 40 she has directed, she has repeated only three of them.

"Pollyanna," in which she took the leading role, was repeated three times, and "Snowwhite and the Seven Dwarfs" and "Rackety Packety House" twice each. Of the five plays she produces yearly, she appears personally in only one. The most thrilling part she ever took was the part of Peter Pan, which she feels should always be played by a grown person. "Pollyanna" is the play she most enjoyed producing, for the sake of the children, but of all the roles she has ever acted, her favorite was the small part of Sarah Maud Ruggles in "Byrd's Christmas Carol."

University students and children act in the children's plays. The youngest boy Miss Gellatly has ever worked with was Norman Wait, who was only four when he first began acting for her. Two thirteen-year-olds who have taken leader under her were George Blackstone and Bob Eager.

As for the future of children's plays, Miss Gellatly is optimistic. "I cannot help thinking," she admitted, "that a conference of the sort I have just attended in Baltimore will have something to give the younger generation."

Paging The Smart Coed

"The proper study of mankind is—woman." This isn't the right way to cap the quotation in the English Placement test. It implies too little attention to Alexander Pope, Esq. of the 18th century and too much to less academic activities. But I am almost inclined to think this a fault in the right direction. Both library and beauty culture can be attained at the same time, but Pope, if necessary, can be put off. Your beauty must be studied and cared for in youth if you wish to have any beauty to care for in later life.

I am going to take it for granted that you know how to keep your face truly clean and your skin healthy. Certainly, if your skin is not healthy there is no use expecting make-up to work miracles. A vibrant, colorful rouge will make the eyes seem brighter despite a muddy tired skin, but it will never look natural or enchantingly piquant.

If your skin is good, the first thing to consider is its color. The color of your hair and eyes is not always a good guide. You may have blue eyes and blonde hair but an olive complexion. A clear, bright rouge and lipstick are best for any color skin, but an olive complexion calls for a particularly deep, bright shade. Red poppy rouge and lipstick will make the olive blonde glow. Red geranium, an even richer color, is perfect for the very dark olive skin. Peach-bloom or mauresque powder according to whether she is a darc or a light olive, will make the rouge blend naturally with the clear, warm skin tone of the rest of the face.

The blonde with a fair translucent complexion should choose the new terra cotta shade of powder, rouge and lipstick to make the best of her naturally attractive qualities. And the warmth and vibrancy of these cosmetics will make a devastating contrast with her hair.

If your hair is dark but your skin light, you might try red coral rouge and lipstick. You may be surprised by the added vivacity it gives you. If, however, there is little orange in your skin, the red raspberry rouge will undoubtedly look better on you. It is a lovely rose color, bright, but not too bright to blend easily into the skin and give that delicately healthy look which is the peculiar charm of some skins. Rachel, peachbloom or mauresque powder will suit this type of skin.

LUCKIES—A LIGHT SMOKE

Recent chemical tests show* that other popular brands have an excess of acidity over Lucky Strike of from 53% to 100%.

*RESULTS VERIFIED BY INDEPENDENT CHEMICAL LABORATORIES AND RESEARCH GROUPS...

Over a period of years, certain basic advances have been made in the selection and treatment of cigarette tobaccos for Lucky Strike Cigarettes. They include preliminary analyses of the tobaccos selected; use of center leaves; the higher heat treatment of tobacco ("toasting"); consideration of acid-alkaline balance, with consequent definite improvement in flavor; and controlled uniformity in the finished product.

All these combine to produce a superior cigarette—a modern cigarette, a cigarette made of rich, ripe-bodied tobaccos—A Light Smoke.
