Increased School Tax Dooms Higher Salaries--Aylsworth

Professor Believes Chances For Restoring Cut Impossible.

Favoring partial restoration of cuts in the pay of teachers, which took place following the lowering of the valuation of property within the district, Prof. L. E. Aylsworth, political science professor, E. B. Stephenson, chairman of the board of the Security Mutual Life Insurance company, and Maurice A. Hyde, board member of the same company, took issue recently against the passing of an additional 1 1/2 mills tax levy, holding that such a rate would be too high.

Throughout the statement given out by these three men was the suggestion that an additional assessment of 1 mill would be the most workable plan.

The basis of the idea for the 1 1/2 mill levy, rather than a higher increase, is shown by the statement issued by the three men. It comments: "We have repeatedly, in private conferences with delegations from women's organizations and individual school board members endorsed a partial restoration of the cut."

The statement issued concludes by pointing out, "we believe, therefore, that the school board will better serve the interest of the teachers if it asks only for a one mill increase. We hope, for the sake of the teachers, that the school board will do this."
