Power of offense, as shown by total points, gives Kansas the lead with 422 points; Nebraska, second, 400; Oklahoma, third, 348: Kansas State, fourth, 327; Missouri, fifth, 287 and Iowa State, sixth, 277.

Defense, as represented by the lowness of the score of opponents, again places Kansas first, with 268, and Nebraska, second, 331. Missouri, near the bottom on offense, was third on defense, with opponents held to 360, and Kansas State permitted opponents only 1 point greater. Iowa State was fifth with 368, and Oklahoma, which placed third in team standing, and was third on offense, had the weakest defense, permitting op-ponents to score 373. Ratio of offense to defense may be expressed in terms of team points in relation to each 1 point scored by opponents. On such a comparison, Kansas is well in the

In the ten conference games, Kansas scored two less field goals than did Nebraska, but more than made up the shortage in the number of free throws made. Nebraska had 164 goals and 72 free throws, while Kansas had 162 goals and 93 free throws.

Kansas won its final in the Olympic preliminary by reason of free throws, since the Jayhawkers had but ten field goals to Okiahoma A. & M.'s 12, but the Kansans connected with 14 of 16 chances from the free throw line for a percentage even better than that of the Big Six competition. In the following table of free throws attempted and made in the Big Six competition, slight correction should be made for Missouri, Nebraska, and Oklahoma, since Kansas State did not include the missed free throws in the official transcript of scores sent to the sec-

Few Fouls.

Avoidance of personal fouls is also a means of defense, since personals give the opponents opportunities to score. In this de-partment, also, Kansas was at the top of the conference, with a total of 91. Nebraska was second with 96 and Iowa State third with 97. Missouri and Oklahoma had 108 each, and Kansas State had 116.

Comparisons do not include nonconference games for any of the Big Six teams, since opposition is not comparable. In general, however, total team records for the season are similar to the records in Big Six competition.

"Cy" Sherman of the Lincoln Star was more than impressed with the showing made last Saturday afternoon by Coach Bible's football pupils. He almost goes so far as to predict a darn good season for the Huskers. We all have the same ideas, and there is that old feeling in the bones that things are going to come out all But at the same time we right. are a bit scared to do any actual predicting. Too many times have writers picked Nebraska for the Rose bowl only to have something pop up and drop a fly in the soup So, if we don't seem to be too enthusiastic, just remember that we are waiting with baited breath to let fly as soon as we are just a bit more certain of the outcome.

Glenn Cunningham seems to have put it over on Venzke and Mangan the other night in the Cohimbia mile. Supposedly inferior at the time to Venzke and Mangan, the comet from Kansas let his opponents set the pace thruout the first 11 laps, and then with a surprising burst of speed sprinted ahead and led the way to the tape by 10 or 12 yards. Glenn was said by some to be "burnt out" by his many races this year. He and his coach, however, claimed that he was merely saving himself for the Olympic games this summer. It appears now that Cunningham was right and he has the stuff even if he didn't care to show it earlier in the year.

Minnesota had a turnout of over 150 freshmen for spring football practice. This is just a small advance warning of what opponents may expect in the way of material from the Gophers next fall. Of course, all of these will not turn into Pug Lunds, Widseths, and Larsons, but at the same time there must be many in the squad that will come up to Bernie Bierman's qualifications of a football player.

Pittsburgh too has its usual amount of material from the mines. These boys come big and rugged and under the watchful eye of Jock Sutherland they turn into great players. Pitt lost many of her stars by graduation, but there always seems to be two coming in for everyone that goes out. And each is just as the man before him. Pittsburgh's round training table for football players doesn't hurt the team any
