The total registration showed a distinct gain over that of a year ago while the musical training of the 126 high school students was superior to that demonstrated in past years.

Francis, Amen Leave With American Team For Berlin Olympiad

Nebraska Fullback Places Second in Shot Put Event Finals.

"Smilin' Sam" Francis, the burley Nebraska fullback, and Paul Amen, prominent sophomore star at the University last year, sailed Wednesday on the Olympic ship, the Manhattan, to compete in the Berlin Olympic games.

Placing second in the shot finals at the final United States track and field tryouts Sunday afternoon at Randall's Island stadium in New York, the Husker shot putter was assured a trip to Germany. At the same time, Lloyd Carwell, the other husker entry, suffering from a pulled muscle, was able to take only one jump. Carwell injured the muscle at the national A. A. U. games last week.

On Baseball Squad.

Amen was named as a member of the baseball squad of the United States after tryouts Monday. He won letters in football, basketball, and baseball as a Husker last year, and for the past few years he has been outstanding in the city baseball league as a first baseman. The Olympic squad of 20 players, of which he is a member, will give baseball "demonstrations" at the Olympic games. They were chosen as a result of a series of tryouts at Baltimore.

In the 16 pound shot put event in which Francis placed, Jack Torrance of Baton Rouge, La., placed first with a record of 51 feet, 6 and 3-8 inches. Francis, whose record Sunday was 50 feet, 4 inches, has in the past bettered the record with which Torrance won the shot event.

Because the Olympic team is composed of the first three place winners in each event, Francis was made a member of the team (Continued on Page 3).

Schools Should Give Broad Understanding

Students should be presented with facts concerning all present day political practices and led to draw their own conclusions. This seems to be the consensus of opinion of a group of educators who were questioned recently by the Nebraskan regarding the schools' part in attempting to set up a new social order.

A broad understanding will dispel controversy and prejudice concerning religion and politics, the group of administrators believes. Condemning teacher oaths as superficial, they believe that teachers should not be denied the right by an oath to refrain from teaching truth as they see it. If this were done, they say, the teachers' hands would be tied and society would be lost.

Must Face Controversies.

Supt. Earle Wiltse of York believes that it is impossible to conduct a functioning school in modern society without facing controversial issues.

"Unless students are allowed to face such problems in school where both sides of an issue can be presented fairly, they will become the prey of propagandists and selfish pressure groups," he declared. "Our schools are not so much concerned with what people think, as that they think. What better can we do to develop thinking than to stimulate a fair discussion of the unsolved issues of the day?" he asks.

Students should have access to a library where the very best authorities on political subjects can be read. So believes Frank Alder, head of the Pierce schools.

"They should be led to use the best scientific methods in determining their own stand on issues; that is, making no decisions until all evidence is in and weighed," Alder asserted.

Every school should be a functioning democracy and people of the community should understand it as such, in his opinion. We lean over backward to give democracy a chance, but if democracy has faults they should not be hidden from students. It is the citizen of tomorrow, he believes, whose business it will be to correct these faults.

Education Not Static.

"Life is not static, so education cannot be," said Miss Elizabeth Rainey, elementary supervisor of the Omaha schools. "Our aim in the social studies is to develop understanding as stated in the yearbook of the department of superintendence of the N. E. A. for January. By improving the individual we improve the whole of society. If children grow up forming broadminded tolerant views, adult society will become tolerant and broadminded," Miss Rainey pointed out.

Miss Mary Kelly, visiting instructor and nationally known authority in the field of social studies, declared that two things must be considered in order to decide whether or not the school should take the lead in attempting to set up a new social order: First, that the schools are supported and set up by means of perpetuating the kind of society that sets them up and secondly, that the school itself is only a part of society.

Schools Reflect Thought.

Believing that the schools should reflect the best thinking of all time, Miss Kelly continued: "We must find out what the problem is—then the solution must be proposed by the people and then examined by the schools. The process," she asserted, "would begin in the elementary schools and be carried on thru the secondary schools. Whether the process should start before school age is another phase of the question.

Concerning the social studies curriculum, she said that it has been accepted readily in the (Continued on Page 4).
