Paging The Smart Coed

Required Course For Beauties.

College years constitute the formative and impressionistic age of beauty. A little corrective care, a few deft touches of pure make-up, and the basis of lasting loveliness is laid.

It's so simple to care for your complexion during collegiate years and such fascinating things can be done with make-up! A short course in skin care, started at the

it is fresh and new, but easily crushed and wrinkled. These are the three main types of skin. There is also a fourth—a combination skin, which needs the most intelligent attention—for parts of the face are oily, and parts are dry. Like a two-piece dress! And each area that is only requires the treatment for that type of skin, and each dry area requires its own specialized care.

Dabbing lotions on your skin with the general idea that they will correct oiliness or dryness is a fashion that lost out with hoop skirts and bustles. Just as college today develops athletes as well as study, so modern beauty care stars from within out and from outside in!

No Spinach?

I am not going to tell you to eat spinach—but eat plenty of the vegetables you do like. Eat plenty of fruits, too—and when you get a cake from home, share it with all your friends, so you will have just a little piece left for yourself. Drink water as if you were on a desert—six or eight glasses a day is not too many—but always drink them between meals. You have heard all this in physiology classes, of course, but it is also an essential part of your beauty program. This is the internal cleanliness upon which beauty is founded.

External cleanliness is equally important. But complexions need more than a shower once a day! You may wash with a pore deep cleanser, to remove effectively every trace of dirt. But even those who wash need a cream cleanser too! Why? Because a pasteurized cream seeps deeply into the pores, often dirt imbedded there and makes it easier to remove.

All types of skin need both types of cleansing! The dry skin needs washing about once a week with a special blackhead and open pore paste that is blended for this type. It also requires a special blend of pasteurized cream, which should be used daily. The normal or oily skin should use a granular wash, such as beauty grains, every other day—and ordinary pasteurized cream for additional cleansing.

These are the fundamental principles every college girl should know and follow. In the coming weeks I shall discuss special beauty problems so that your course in beauty care may be complete.

Musical Footnotes

The first musical convocation of the season was held yesterday afternoon in the Temple theater, featuring the fine arts string quartet and Earnest Harrison, member of the university piano faculty.

The program opened with a movement from Schubert's Quartet in G minor which was executed with a forcefulness which this highly rhythmical work needs.

In the Brahms Quintet which followed, Mr. Harrison joined the group and played with his characteristic clarity and competence. This difficult and highly intellectual music of Brahms, although admirably rendered in technique, seems to have been a little beyond the complete understanding of the student players. Yet we felt grateful for being allowed to listen to some of the best music which is so seldom heard.

Members of the quartet are: Eunice Bingham, first violin; Marjory Smith, second violin; Margaret Baker, Viola; Marylouise Baker, cello.

College athletes are reported to be the best material for male dance numbers. At least, such is the contention of Professor Wolle of the University of Colorado. He must have been watching some of the football routines.
