Station A, Lincoln, Nebraska. THIRTY-FIFTH YEAR. Published every Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Sunday mornings...

leaders trying to arouse some "rah, rahs" from the apathetic onlookers; and 22 football players on the gridiron.

Perhaps the apathy was present because the scarlet colors were on top. That is a marked peculiarity of Cornhusker fans—they cheer for the Huskers when the score is slightly in their favor...

Play was ragged. The first team failed to show any drive, fire, or spirit when it romped to its first quarter touchdowns. The second team or reserve lineup, barely held its own when called to battle...

The day was dark and grey, with rain threat hovering overhead. Most of the spectators were chilly, coldly watching what to them was an exhibition of anything but smart football.

These may have contributed to lack of enthusiasm in the audience, but there was no reason for the dogged, grumbling silence. Some of the plays were expertly handled, and should have evoked applause...

The freshman game usually is a drab affair without a great deal of the flash and fire of football combat. Postponement from Saturday took much of the zest out of the conflict.

One apparent weakness is in the strength of reserves. Where the first team gained 10 yards, the second was lucky to gain one. Freshman opposition certainly is not a measure of the strength of Big Six and intersectional opposition...

The opening day of Cornhusker football games, if yesterday's proceedings can be classed as such, was drab and uninteresting. But it is customary for Cornhusker teams to start slowly, and pick up energy as the season progresses...

Much congestion in the corridors and on the stairs of social sciences following morning classes on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday is caused by the failure of the outgoing students to move briskly and to clear away from the north entrance after getting out of the building...

STUDENT PULSE. Brief, concise contributions pertinent to matters of student life and the university are welcomed by this department...

Has the Regents Bookstore Failed? To the Editor: Last spring the new Regent's Bookstore opened in the basement of Social Science...

However, the general impression which was given to the student body was that it was to be a non-profit organization to save money for the students in buying and selling their used books...

I will admit that the Regent's Bookstore has forced the general price level of used books upward. But, what I would like to know is how can privately owned bookstores buy and sell used books at the same price as the Regent's Bookstore can which is supposed to be a non-profit organization...

The Regent's Bookstore is supposed to save the student body 10 percent on new books. But, is it worth this 10 percent when the student has to wait three weeks after his first class to buy a book and find out what his courses are about?

When the Regent's Bookstore opened in the basement of Social Sciences last spring I was 100 percent for it because I thought (1) that it was a non-profit organization; (2) that it would have on hand (especially for the first few weeks of school) enough text books to meet the demand for all students for all courses...

Blue Monday! Dana X. Bible paraded his 1936 Cornhusker football team against the freshmen yesterday. It was a very nice parade—as far as the appellation can be misconstrued by sports writers to mean a football game...

GLIMPSES Of the World About

Spanish rebel bombs made Bilbao, the scene of mob slaughter after repeated demands that the loyalists surrender the city to insurgent armies.

Over a hundred inhabitants of the city were either blown to bits or crushed beneath crumbling walls.

Immediately after the orgy infuriated mobs stormed government buildings which held over 4,000 insurgent hostages, demanding that they be brought out and killed.

Some sage aptly described war when he said that it is the combination and concentration of all the horrors, crimes, and atrocities of which human nature upon this globe is capable.

Randolph Churchill, British tory political leader and scion of the house of Marlborough, stated upon his arrival in New York last week, that Great Britain would back America if she is ever endangered by Japan in a war.

How much more interest this gentleman would have created had he said that Great Britain would pay off long overdue debts of the last year.

Mr. Churchill also made the statement that communism vs. fascism should not be the considered as a real issue in Europe. What would Mr. Churchill call a real issue? Has it not been issue enough for one of the bloodiest civil wars the world has ever known?

Cold, hard facts should preclude any thought of Germany, alone, attempting to wrest a "colony" from Russia. Russia has a standing army of 1,300,000 with 15,000,000 trained reserves led by a highly developed air force.

Japan or Italy seem to be the nations most likely to assist the nazis in such an action, but Italy has had to put many men into Ethiopia, to say nothing about any aspirations she may have to grab a part or all of Spain, and Japan is busily engaged absorbing China.

David Lloyd George's scathing attack upon General Pershing and the entire American World war machine reminds us of the old saw about people who live in glass houses.

Although entry of the United States into the war is almost inexcusable, the facts remain that we did enter, that the A. E. F. was finally the greatest single contributing factor to allied victory, and that with the lone exception of Finland war debts to the United States remain unpaid.

Harry H. Woodring, a former governor of Kansas, has been appointed secretary of war by President Roosevelt in the vacancy caused by the death of George H. Dern.

Japan seems to be considering an offensive in the Shanghai, China, area following Japanese demands for protection in the international settlement.

Control of the important port of Shanghai would give the Japs complete control of the Yangtze River river mouth and effectively bottle up the city of Nanking. This would leave the conquest of China an almost mechanical operation.

Earl T. Platt, in charge of supervised correspondence study for the extension division, appeared three times on the program of the work training project and conference for supervisors of correspondence study centers held at the University of Michigan, September 14 and 25. Mr. Platt is recognized as a leader in this field.
