Huskers Pass For 13-9 Victory Over Hoosiers

LAST HALF RALLY TURNS TIDE WITH FRANCIS IN FORM

McDonald, Douglas Catch Howell's Flips for Needed Scores.

By Morris Lipp.

Surmounting a nine point lead that the Hoosiers tallied in the first half, Coach Dana X. Bible's Cornhuskers came back in the last two quarters to score two touchdowns by passes to win 13 to 9. Over 33,000 fans jammed Memorial stadium to watch the Huskers fight it out with the Hoosiers Saturday.

"There were two games today," Coach Bible told pressmen after the game. Indiana won the first one and we won the second."

And that just about tells the entire story of the contest. The Cornhuskers lacked the scoring punch thruout the first half, while the inspired Hoosiers did what they pleased during the first two quarters, including the scoring of a field goal and a touchdown.

Huffman Played Great.

Led by their great quarterback, Vernon Huffman, who plays as if he were Jay Berwanger (ex-Chicago) and Red Gray (Oregon State) combined, Indiana swept down the Memorial Stadium field in 9½ minutes and five first downs to score three points. George Miller, Hoosier center, made the conversion.

Huffman passed and ran in the second quarter until the Hoosiers were ready to put the ball over for a touchdown. Nelson Beasley, one of the Big Ten's finest ends, got in the clear and Huffman heaved him a perfect pass that resulted in the Indiana tally. Les McDonald broke thru to block Miller's attempted placekick.

Half-time Pep Talk.

What Coach Bible told the Cornhusker's during half-time will probably never be known, but his talk must have turned the tide. Not only that, but Ramblin' Sam Francis, Nebraska's fullback who suffered a leg injury in the game against Minnesota, started at fullback in the third quarter, to revive the lagging Cornhusker spirit.

Sam's appearance in the Husker lineup brought prolonged cheers from the multitude and a new attitude toward the Hoosiers by the members of the Nebraska eleven. More than likely, the Hoosiers didn't care for Sam's appearance, as he was largely responsible for the Indiana downfall. In short, Francis proved to be Nebraska's "sparkplug."

Francis Leads Offense.

Nebraska's offense began to click as soon as Francis returned the Hoosier kickoff to the Nebraska 31. Francis faked, gave the ball to Cardwell who in turn lateraled to Powell bringing the ball to the Nebraska 48. Cardwell went around end for nine and then hit the line for a first down while the crowd roared its approval.

A series of line plays involving Cardwell, Francis and Douglas brought the ball into scoring territory, but a pass from Francis to McDonald went incomplete, and Indiana took the ball on their own 25.

Huffman, Fowler and Norton, Indiana backs, took turns at trying to probe into the Husker line, but each one of them met a stone wall. Fowler was forced to punt and Nebraska took the ball on their own 45.

Douglas made a yard at center. Howell took the ball from Francis and skirted Indiana's left end to advance the ball from Indiana's 46 to their 30. Francis's pass to McDonald was good for 16 yards. Francis and Cardwell made several more yards in line plays. Howell tossed a perfect forward to McDonald who was in the end zone for Nebraska's first touchdown of the tilt. Francis placekicked the extra point with Howell holding.

Cardwell Breaks Loose.

The Cornhuskers kept forcing the Hoosiers back in the latter part of the third quarter, while Huffman attempted all sorts of plays against the Huskers. Taking the ball from their own 40, the Biblemen staged another touchdown drive. Francis did most of the ball lugging here and brought the ball to the Indiana 23.

In the opening plays of the final quarto, Cardwell advanced the ball to the Indiana 10 in a nicely executed lateral play. Three line smashes by Francis netted 5 yards. Howell once more faded back to pass and dropped one into Douglas' outstretched arms for the tally. Francis' attempted placekick was no good.

Indiana Aerial Attack.

A Husker lead was the incentive for an aerial attack by the Hoosiers with Huffman doing the passing. Huffman attempted pass after pass, but few were completed. Kenderdine was Indiana's best pass receiver who managed to snag several.

Last few minutes of the game saw most of the action in midfield. Whenever the Indians got possession of the ball, they attempted to pass. When the Huskers had it, they played safe and killed time with running plays.

Upon being congratulated for the fine showing of his team, Coach "Bo" McMillin accepted the well wishers' sayings, but continually muttered about the strategic errors his Hoosiers committed, especially in reference to being "sucked in" on pas defense.

Coach Bible thought that Kenderdine, Captain Dal Sasso and Huffman were Indiana's best men, and rightly so. Huffman gave a great performance as the Hoosier field general and No. 1 ball carrier, while Dal Sasso's line play and Kenderdine's pass receiving are worthy of many superlatives.

All Huskers Starred.

For Nebraska every man was a star in his position. McDonald and Dohrman handled their flank positions admirably well. Shirey and Doyle plugged the tackle berths.

Game Captain Douglas' blocking and ball-running are deserving of much praise, while Johnny Howell's quarterbacking and passing were virtually flawless. Cardwell, as usual, played a brilliant game, getting away in his own inimitable style for long and needed Husker gains. Harris Andrews, who started at left half, gave a good account of himself during the first half.
