Country on this, and found only a small fraction of the people favored this idea. This greatly relieved the poor congressmen.

On the other hand, the Literary Digest poll is due for reorganization if not extinction. The last election, coupled with more accurate results in former elections, proves that although the Digest is fairly accurate in an average election, they are entirely wrong in a class election. Also, the method of sending out 10,000,000 ballots is too expensive to be done often.

while George Gallup's method of polling only a few, but selection these few scientifically, is not only more accurate, but much less expensive.

UNIVERSITY NOTES

Friends of Dr. W. F. Thompson, formerly of the department of English here, who is now on the staff of Michigan State university, will be interested to know that he will be featured on the Lansing, Mich. "college of the air" program in a series of broadcasts on Shakespeare's comedies. Dr. Thompson, who received his Ph. D. degree here last June, has been invited to take one of the leading roles in one of the theater productions by the Lansing Theater Guild. He will also direct one of the group's productions sometime during the year. The former Lincoln man has just been named a member of the course of study committee for the fine arts department, and will speak Nov. 13 before the Women's historical society.

Mrs. S. R. McKelvie sent the museum an unusually fine crystal collection which has been given in memory of her mother. Many of the crystals are beautifully and extraordinarily formed.

Dwight Kirsch, chairman of the fine arts department, spoke before members of the Hastings Woman's club Friday on "Interior Decoration in the Home."

Dr. Dewey Stuit of the teachers college at Ft. Dodge addressed members of the Lincoln Business and Professional Women's club Monday on "The Home and the School."

Prof. R. D. Moritz, director of the university summer school, returned last week from presiding at the national convention of the American Association of Summer School Directors held at Northwestern university. He was president the past year. The association is made up of 36 universities and colleges whose graduate work constitutes 33 per cent of their summer school enrollment. New officers include Dean B. W. Bolwell of George Washington university, Dr. R. B. Rulston of Johns Hopkins, secretary. Next convention will be held at Baltimore. While in Chicago Professor Moritz attended sessions of the National Institutional Placement association.

Dr. W. C. Brenke, chairman of the mathematics faculty, was named a member of the executive committee of the mathematics division of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education.

Hi-Y members of Lincoln heard Prof. Linus Burr Smith, chairman of the department of architecture, speak Tuesday night on "Modern Europe." The talk was illustrated Sunday afternoon Professor Smith will deliver an illustrated address on "The Architecture of Washington and Jefferson" at Joslin Memorial at Omaha. This lecture has been heard over Nebraska and in two Iowa communities and is being given in Omaha upon special request. "The Ancient Peoples" was the subject of his address before the art department of the Lincoln Woman's club Friday afternoon. Professor Smith's water color paintings "Tapestry" will be shown in the Lincoln Artist Guild's annual preview. As an attraction to art teachers and instructors in architecture, the department had an exhibition of student work hung along the corridor in the basement of the Temple.

NEWS PARADE

Roosevelt's ability as a politician is this writer's explanation of the unexpected democratic landslide. The president did not start campaigning until a few weeks before election. He started out with the more or less intellectual subjects, such as a defense of the unbalanced budget and defense of the national debt. He saved his real voice getter—the emotional topics of relief, social security against old age and unemployment, a return to the NRA with higher wages and better working conditions—to the last few days. With the aid of the radio, he was able to reach most of the population of the country and work them up to fever pitch, the peak of which was reached Tuesday, Nov. 3. Especially were the lower income classes affected by these last minute speeches. The result was a democratic landslide, the completeness of which probably surprised even Jim Farley. If Roosevelt had started earlier, the peak would have been passed before Nov. 3, due to the natural cooling of emotions and due to the fact that the press and his opponents would have a chance to more fully expose the faults in his emotionally strong but often intellectually weak plans.

Landon, on the other hand, was always conservative and if anything became more conservative toward the end. He made no emotional appeal to the masses, perhaps because Roosevelt had a prior claim to all the plans articulated to bring out the vote of the masses. As a result, the upper classes voted for him, he was snubbed under by the numerical preponderance of the masses which so fully endorsed Roosevelt. There was at least one person who was even more unhappy about the election than Landon. This man was Wilfred Funk, the editor of the Literary Digest. The Literary Digest, as you probably recall, made the unfortunate prediction that Landon would win by 370 electoral votes to Roosevelt's 161 and that Landon would have a popular majority of 57. As you also probably know, the actual results were almost directly contrary to this forecast. The actual result in which Landon carried only two states
