THREE NAMED FOR STUDENT COUNCIL CONCLAVE AT K. U.

(Continued from Page 1.) ed and sensible discussions of similar campus activities will greatly help us to improve our own and will keep us from stepping forward blindly." Although each delegate will bring his own personal problems and suggestions, Levin admitted the belief that general interest of all will be greatly enhanced by the offerings of each school. He added that all schools will be able to benefit from the experiences of others which will be recounted at the conference discussions. Miss Bennett advised that preparations have probably been made for separate round-table discussions of publications, student government and politics, student union buildings, athletics, honorary and professional organizations, the "Honors system," intramurals, rotation of large orchestras, and others covering all phases of student life on campus.

"We are going to this meeting with a full realization that each with a full realization that each is expected to return a complete report of each discussion in which we participate," declared Miss Bennett. "There will probably be several different discussions being carried on at all times, thereby forcing us to attend the meetings alone; however, we will keep our eyes and ears open for any new and beneficial ideas which may be suggested at the conference." These meetings were inaugurated in 1926 under the motivating power of Nebraska, and have been held annually at Big Six schools since that time, although the Cornhuskers have always been the leading advocates and participants in the conferences.

Similar conference was held in Lincoln last year under the auspices of the National Student Federation of America at which eleven universities from six states were represented. Discussions were held on campus political parties, the honor system, and student union buildings.

Streamlined Fowl Last Survivor of His Race at Ames

AMES, Ia., Nov. 12.—A streamlined rooster, result of a cross between a pheasant and a leghorn remains as the sole specimen of his race at Iowa State college since the death of a hen of the same breeding recently.

The fowl, hatched in 1935, was produced as part of an effort by N. F. Waters, assistant professor of poultry husbandry, to study the results of such a cross and to determine whether such a hybrid could reproduce. As yet the streamlined rooster is without offspring.

Such crosses have been made before, and the "white pheasants" not infrequently described by farmers or sportsmen are crosses between pheasants and barnyard fowls. Professor Waters said. The rooster at Iowa State college carries the general characteristics of a pheasant but is larger, not so brilliant in color and lacks the characteristic pheasant ring around his neck.

The experiment will be continued next spring when Professor Waters plans to make more crosses.

REGENTS TO MAKE FINAL PLANS FOR UNION SATURDAY

(Continued from Page 1.) needs of the university, many general and useful suggestions were derived from the trip.

Few Revisions Suggested.
"The board of regents will make any further revisions in the plans as it sees fit when it meets on Saturday morning," the chancellor advised. "It is unlikely that there will be many changes as the revisions made after our trip were few and not of great importance. We are expecting some suggestions from Prof. E. F. Schramm, however, who has visited the University of Kansas at Lawrence where there is a very new union building."

Form of organization for the new building as well as appointment of the members who will serve as its executive board may be considered at this meeting, according to Chancellor Burnett. "The committee which will be in charge of the building will be composed of faculty and student members of the university," he said. "I hope they will have time to accomplish this although there is enough time for it to be delayed a little longer without trouble."

Organization Plan Submitted.
At the Student Council meeting held Tuesday afternoon, a plan of organization was approved by the members and will be suggested to the regents to aid their legislation. The plan was composed by Marylu Petersen and Arnold Levin, council members who made the visit to the union buildings.

Contents of the plan provide for a 13 member board of directors, 9 of whom would be students, 3 faculty members, 3 alumni, and one board chairman. Two student members would be elected from each of the three upper classes. To make policies more permanent, members would always be eligible for re-election, enabling students to serve on the board for three consecutive years. The plan forbade more than three of the board members from belonging to the Student Council, and provided that there must be at least two women and three unaffiliated students on the committee. This setup, found with certain modifications on each of the campuses visited by the Chancellor's committee, vests all control of the building including arrangements for speakers, contests, social functions and other activities in the hands of the board, which would be directly responsible to the Board of Regents. No provision was made for selection of the alumni and faculty members.

Reaction and the American University

Editor's Note: This is the second and final installment of an article written by Robert G. Spivack for the May-June issue of The National Student Mirror. The article tells of the growing importance of the collegiate press as an educational and political medium of expression.

The Spectator, the Campus, the Miscellany News of Vassar, the Dartmouth publication and other of the eastern undergraduate journals still are most consistent in their presentation of progressive views. The Spectator refers to Nicholas Murray Butler as a stuffed shirt, it has initiated an investigation of labor conditions there, and it has jumped with both feet upon the authorities who accepted an invitation to "celebrate" Heidelberg university's 550th anniversary. The others have persistently pecked away at the loyalty oaths and the attempts to stifle free expression.

The one outstanding difference between the eastern publications and many of those elsewhere is the consistency with which the former veer to the "left." At Ohio university, for example, the Green and White which had been a fairly progressive paper, in times of crisis—when the president, Dr. Herman G. James, and his reactionary board of trustees established an R. O. T. C. without warrant—capitulated to the authorities. The editor who confesses he sees no use for the R. O. T. C., has suddenly discovered that it will minimize the number killed in the next war!

In announcing a happy trend it is still important to understand that many of the other kind of college papers still exist. There are those which, because of censorship or unconsciousness on the part of the editors, are still apathetic toward the problems of these times.

There are such as the Diamondback at the University of Maryland which in the best manner of great god Hearst cry "red" three times a day. Or there is the Kernel of the University of Kentucky which intimated that if a conspiracy of silence would not eliminate "un-Americans" from the campus there were other ways.

Little did the sagacious college presidents think the students would take them seriously. They are perturbed about this new attitude. In more learned circles they object to the "unscientific" approach of the critical editorial matter. At some institutions there have been suspensions of militant editors. But the results have been extremely unfortunate—student demonstrations and that sort of thing. Editors who were heretofore unheard of became martyrs. So many administrators are still groping around in the attempt to censor the press without calling

Prof. Wadsworth to Talk At French Lunch Today

Prof. J. R. Wadsworth, assistant professor of the Romance Language department, will speak at the luncheon this noon of "Le Cercle Francais" at the Capital Hotel. Reservations may be made for 35 cents with Catherine Piazza in the Romance Language library. Students in the French department are urged to attend the luncheon as they will find it beneficial in speaking French fluently.

It censorship and without letting the public know the real nature of the thing. But they haven't yet found the formula for fooling the pugnacious editors.

There are some authorities, who while disagreeing with the new point of view, still adhere to the doctrine of Voltaire. Dr. Raymond Walters at Cincinnati is one, likewise Dr. Cecil V. Thomas of Penn. President MacCracken of Vassar and a few others. Unfortunately there is not a parallel trend elsewhere. At Columbia the Spectator will have to shift financially handicapped next year. Notwithstanding the impediments of apathy, social reaction, and undemocratic college administrators the new trend in college papers casts a ray of light on an otherwise dark horizon. In many institutions the college newspapers are doing more to educate the student body to the realities of everyday life than are the faculties.
