Interest Re-Awakens.

That there still exists a propensity on the part of the student mind to interest itself in the affairs of the world was disclosed with the revival of the International Relations Club.

It is a worthy undertaking, for now as never in the past decade international relations have taken on an aspect which threatens the future security and peaceful living of students the world over.

The Daily Nebraskan news article characterized the club as having in the past "comprised the nucleus of liberal students on the campus."

It is a variety of opinion that adds zest to this organization. Liberals, all of one mind, would find little to discuss.

STUDENT PULSE

Brief, concise contributions pertinent to matters of student life and to the university are welcomed by this newspaper practice, which excludes all libelous matter and personal attacks.

To Correct a False Impression.

The following is an excerpt from a letter by Dr. Edgar S. Furniss, Dean of the Graduate School of Yale University, in regard to charges made by Harry Elmer Barnes in a recent speech here to the effect that Yale University dismissed a member of its staff because of opposition to prevalent political opinions:

"I am glad that you wrote me about the situation at Yale as described by Harry Elmer Barnes. It is quite untrue, of course, that Yale is 'firing' any of its staff because of its opposition to social or political opinions. The man in question is not a full professor, but a member on temporary tenure of the faculty of the Divinity School. It is true that he holds rather advanced views on social matters and has been quite active in propagating his opinions. It is true, too, that these activities have aroused opposition to him among the alumni, but the university has been very careful during his tenure to protect him from attack on this ground and to assure him all the freedom he desired in the matter of expressing his views.

ever, a false interpretation of the situation, Yale has always had an enviable record in its defense of freedom of speech and opinion among its faculty, and it can be said truthfully that this case is no exception."

Why Cut Before Vacation? TO THE EDITOR:

The university sets aside time every year for Thanksgiving and Christmas vacations. But some students seem to think that school officials do not actually mean that these are fixed dates and apply to them, for these students must always leave two or three days early. But, can anything be done about such a problem?

A few students evidently think that if a vacation actually begins on Thursday, then that really means that they are to go home Tuesday, or if the vacation starts Tuesday, then they must leave the Friday before. Would it do any good to change vacation dates—set them ahead a few days for example, and provide for a still longer vacation? In that event, the only response from those students who leave early would be for them to leave still earlier.

Assuredly, nothing could be done along that line, for those students feel that no matter what date is set, they must leave before then. Another plan would be for the instructors to reserve examinations until the final class meeting before vacations. This might work, yet if those students are bound to cut and have formed the habit, no examinations will stand in their way. And no instructor likes to give an examination when he knows for a certainty it will have to be repeated later.

No one can keep them in school if they are determined to leave, as the system of double cuts before and after vacations has proved. By leaving early they disrupt classes and school schedules, yet apparently nothing can be done by the university to correct this entirely. It is not a question that the university can settle; it is entirely up to those who feel they must always leave two or three days early for each vacation. What can be done to remedy this is a problem to be solved by these students, and evidently they are not enough concerned to do much about it.—Velma French.

GLIMPSES By Dale Martin.

The conference of American States now being held in South America is not the regular meeting of western hemisphere diplomats but a special conference called by President Roosevelt at the conclusion of peace between Bolivia and Paraguay.

Latin American countries have become nervous over the disappearance of the last independent country in Africa despite the protests of the League of Nations. Threats of a European war and the dictatorial desires of some European countries to obtain colonies make them anxious to unite countries of the western hemisphere, Europe, therefore, may be warned to maintain a hands off policy toward American countries by the Americas speaking as a whole.

President Roosevelt's appearance in Buenos Aires symbolizes the desire of the Americans to be free from aggression and to uphold the rights of all nations. Throughout the Americas differences have generally been confined within the boundaries of individual countries, and no American country looks from its neighbors with eyes of aggression.

Two Wall Street Journal experts spent six weeks finding out what "Social Security" was all about. The two main phases of the program, however, are fairly clear.

Taxes to finance the annuities will come through pay deductions made by employers. The eligible worker pays one percent of his wages (up to $3,000 per year) to the Federal government, beginning next year. The tax rate will then increase by one half of one percent in 1949. Employers must match the percent every three years until it reaches three percent in 1949. Employers must match the worker's share of the taxes. Wages represented in merchandise must be included.

To receive the benefits any worker who reaches 65 in 1942 or later may quit his job and receive government checks the rest of his life if he has been employed at least one day in each of five calendar years after 1936, and if his earnings during that period total at least $2,000.
