HEAVY, HEAVY HANGS OVER YOUR HEAD

In order to get your attention, we shall first of all tell what we firmly believe is a joke.

It seems there was a certain athlete who hadn't been studying his lessons and consequently was getting himself on the flunking border. In fact, conditions got so bad (the one his English teacher gave him particularly) that he had to take a special exam in order to make himself eligible for athletic participation.

The time came for the athlete to take the exam and the coach waited anxiously for a report of the test. Three hours after starting the test, the athlete burst triumphantly out of the room, tore over to the coach's office, and burst triumphantly into the room.

"I done it," he exclaimed. "The prof looked my paper over and said I was illegible."

Besides the pun, the above anecdote has an underlying point of interest.

There have been many men of athletic prominence in Nebraska's history whose names have been set in big black print on the nation's newspaper pages. There have been many more athletes enrolled at Nebraska who would have become objects of hero-worship and enjoyed the taste of competition under university colors but for one thing—GRADES.

Scholastic eligibility is the first requirement of an athlete in university circles. Not muscles, nor sense of timing, co-ordination, balance, nor skill in his chosen sport, but scholastic eligibility. Without a high enough average to make him eligible, the athlete is of no use to his coach, to his school, and the third item is the one that should interest the athlete most to his own self. It is mainly because of the thrill he gets out of competing in sports that the athlete performs and if he is ineligible to perform he is cheating himself out of that thrill and the ultimate goals that might be attained thru competition on a university team.

Athletic fame is at best but transient glory. No group knows this better than the athletic department, the majority of whose members have experienced the temporary spotlight life of the college athlete. Memories of athletic comradeship and events are pleasant things to look back on but are wispy things upon which to base a life's occupation. College affords the opportunity to those who enter it to learn how to live better and how to make a living. It gives intellectual tools to those that would use them. And the administration wishes to help the college students. It is for that reason that the system of eligibility has been devised. To protect the athlete. In some schools, scholastic eligibility has sometimes been overlooked or side-stepped thru efforts of the athlete's friends. It has probably happened at Nebraska in a few cases, but rarely. Particularly not in the last ten years. Whenever it has happened the athlete has been the loser.

Practice Makes Perfect? The athlete who fails to see the relative importance of matters will spend three or four hours a day practicing something in which he is already rather an expert and lets his studies slide. As a result, he doesn't get to compete and his athletic ability, which he would use for about the next three or four years on the average, would be of no advantage to anybody, least of all the athlete himself. He will waste time worrying about his studies while the best way to eliminate the worry is to keep plugging away at the books for a consistent four or five hours a day. If he is busy studying he has no time to worry and the cause for worry will be eliminated.

If the athlete in college will read his high school paper printed six months after graduation he will find no mention of his name. New names are in his place. It will be the same after he gets out of college, that is, providing he ever becomes eligible long enough to compete.

Examples. Here are a couple of outstanding cases, with roadrunner names. Joe Blank was a sprinter at Nebraska.

AMERICAN STUDENTS TO RETURN AID TO FAR EASTERN BROTHERS

Oriental Neighbors Gave $50,000 to U. S. During Great 1936 Flood.

Buy a tag now, help fellow university students in the orient—they helped American students!

During the great Mississippi flood of 1936, the Chinese people donated $50,000 to help Americans in their time of need. Today the orient is involved in one of the great wars of its history in which Chinese universities have been destroyed and 50,000 Chinese students find their colleges in ruins.

The Chinese government desires to preserve its intellectual youth to furnish leadership of tomorrow. Temporary universities have been established in the interior, and the minimum of equipment secured. The student need in China is acute in transporting Chinese youth inland, giving them food, clothing and shelter, and paying tuition.

Into the situation the students of the World Christian Community have stepped. England has promised $20,000, the United States has pledged $25,000. Other nations are cooperating.

On the local campus Tag Day is to be held this Wednesday. Then Nebraska youth will be able to extend a helping hand to needy fellow students of the orient.

Considering what an American dollar will do for the student in China it is to be noted that one dollar in American money is worth $3.40 in Chinese currency. Ten dollars will take a Chinese student from the coast to the interior to continue his schooling. These dollars will give him a suit of clothes for the winter and one dollar will give him a week's board.

Buy a tag and help a fellow student!
