847 GET DEGREES IN 67TH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT

Dr. Carl Ackerman Speaks On "Our American Axis"
to Crowd of 8,000.

Nations of the Americas must unite in blocking the spread of propoganda in order that peace may be preserved, Dr. Carl W. Ackerman of New York City, dean of the graduate school of journalism at Columbia university, told a gathering of more than 8,000 persons at the university's 67th commencement program Sunday morning.

Dr. Ackerman cited as the two major needs of the American nations today a new faith and a new perspective of their relation to the whole of the western hemisphere. We need to feel a new surety in the spirit of unity of the western hemisphere, he said. We are accustomed to thinking of the American axis as extending only east and west. We must think of it as extending north and south, from Canada to the Argentine.

Education For Peace

In this day of Rome-Berlin, London-Paris, Paris-Moscow axis, our need is to feel a greater consciousness of this American axis, the educator explained, not as isolating us from Europe, but as a means toward a truer understanding and peaceful relations. Education must play a major part in this program, he stated.

Degrees were granted to 847 graduates, the largest group to be graduated since 1932. All colleges except medicine and graduate showed increases.

Honorary degrees were presented to five university alumni. Doctor of laws degree were given Dr. John Clark of Cheyenne, Wyo., professor of economics at the University of Nebraska; Dr. Harry L. Hollingsworth, Montrose, New York, professor of psychology at Barnard college at Columbia university; Dr. E. L. S. Hollingsworth, professor psychology at Columbia, and Dr. William Linn Westermann of Scarsdale, New York, professor of ancient history at Columbia; and a doctor of science degree to John Torrence Tate, dean of the arts college at the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Spencer Speaks

Dr. Robert Nelson Spencer, bishop of West Missouri, Episcopal church, delivered the baccalaureate address to the graduating class Sunday afternoon in the coliseum. His subject was "Counsel of the Heart", and following the address open house for seniors, their parents and friends, faculty and alumni was held in the Student union building.

Saturday evening, seniors dined as the guests of the Student union management at a banquet and dance in the union ballroom. Don Boehm acted as toastmaster at the affair, and Elmer Dohrmann, president of the graduating class, spoke

Dr. E. E. Lackey Urges New Type Geography In Current Magazine

A type of geography "that is dynamic in relation to the problems of the day" is urged by Dr. E. E. Lackey, associate professor of geography, in an article by him appearing in School and Society. Believing that the old geography will not satisfy because "it does not strike deeply into the problems that grip the minds of frontier thinkers of education," Dr. Lackey suggests that geography be taught, not as an independent subject, but as a social science linked with other fields.

"Instead of proposing physical, political, or industrial geography of the United States," he asks, "why not offer a geographic background of American life and problems?"

Moritz Issues Welcome As Summer Term Opens

We extend greetings to students and visiting instructors attending the 44th Summer session at the University of Nebraska.

The Summer session is not only a continuation of the regular year's work but furnishes additional opportunities not offered during the semestral sessions in certain lines of work. The demonstration school, speech clinic, educational conferences, law enforcement officer's institute, and educational exhibits are some of the special features made available to summer school students.

A number of distinguished visiting instructors will offer courses in several departments and special lecturers assist in many courses.

The long felt need of a Student union has at last been realized and students and faculty will enjoy the comforts of an air conditioned building with its modern facilities in cafeteria, dining rooms, lounge, reading room, game room, and conference hall.

We welcome you most heartily and cordially and trust that your summer will be both pleasant and profitable.

COED PLAYS LAW STUDENT. MOTHER ROLES EQUALLY WELL

Mrs. Pauline Von Brandenfels Receives LL. B. Degree at Exercises.

Raising two sturdy young sons is one thing and earning a law degree is another. But Mrs. Pauline von Brandenfels, who received her LL.B. degree at commencement exercises yesterday morning, has combined the two jobs and shown herself very able at both.

It all began when she came to the University in the winter of 1932. Here she met Carl von Brandenfels who was seeking a law degree. In April, 1934, the two were married, and the next fall Mrs. Brandenfels decided to try her own luck in the law college alongside her husband.

Studies progressed very well, interrupted in August, 1935, by the not at all unimportant event of the birth of young Martin. Meanwhile, Mr. Brandenfels got a new job, a much bigger one that demanded so much time that he felt it necessary

South Iowa Trees Lose Leaves From Worm Infestation

AMES, May 18.—Thousands of trees in southern Iowa are being defoliated by the most serious outbreak of canker worms in recent years, H. D. Tate, extension service entomologist at Iowa State college, said today.

Hundreds of apple orchards which were not regularly sprayed this spring have been completely stripped of their leaves, Tate said. In Oskaloosa, where the worms are attacking the elm trees, from 60 to 75 percent of the foliage is already gone.

While the outbreak is confined largely to the southern half of the state, and particularly to the southeastern area, similar outbreaks may develop soon in northern Iowa, Tate said, altho they will probably be less severe.
