ROTC Heads Name Coed Sponsors

Department Withholds Appointment List Till Eligibility Is Checked

All but two of the R. O. T. C. sponsors have been nominated, according to an announcement from the military office Thursday. Today and tomorrow, the list of prospective sponsors will be sent to Dean Thompson's office for an eligibility check-up.

Every unit connected with the military department is entitled to choose a campus coed whose main official functions are to attend the military ball, federal inspection, and the annual camp.

At all of these events, sponsors and officers are paired off. In the work of the official R. O. T. C. memorandum, "The Brigade Colonel's duty is to attend to and look after the Honorary Colonel."

The colonel of the infantry regiment chooses a sponsor who "ranks" below only the honorary colonel. Next come the two sponsors of the Engineer and Artillery units who are chosen by the two lieutenant colonels.

Each major, then, may choose a sponsor for his battalion. Sponsors of companies and batteries are selected by all the officers of the particular unit. The field officer and his staff are also entitled to choose a sponsor.

Altogether, there are 33 sponsors apportioned as follows: One regimental sponsor for the infantry; two unit sponsors for the Engineers and Artillery men, five battalion sponsors, 16 company and four battery sponsors, one sponsor each for the "Cornhusker field company, the Cornhusker battery, Pershing Rifles, the Variety band and the Freshman band.

Eligibility requirements for the sponsors are the same as for any other activity. The military department expects to have this checked and the list ready to be released early next week.

Smith Talks On Cathedrals

Language Students Hear Architect Dean

Prof. Linus Burr Smith, dean of the School of Architecture, traced the development of French Cathedrals from the time of early Roman occupation of Gaul in the first two lectures on French Architecture, Thursday in social science auditorium.

Sponsored by the department of romance languages, the lecture, "The Religious Architecture of France," was attended by a goodly crowd of students and instructors.

Prof. Smith illustrated his talk with slides of outstanding examples of cathedral architecture, showing pictures of Romanesque, Byzantine and Gothic churches in France.

He explained his use of the term "Romanesque," in connection with architecture, saying it was synonymous with "Romance" as applied to languages and culture. The development of cathedral building closely corresponds to the rise of Rag May Get . . .

Citrus May Basket

History May Repeat Itself By Fruit Gift

The Daily Nebraskan has just received a threatening letter from a man who signs his name "Earl E. May."

The threatening line read, "One of these days the citrus will arrive, and beware!"

Now if the threatener were a gangster, it would undoubtedly mean that he was peevish at us for some reason or other and was sending the Rag staff a "pine-apple," which, in the parlance of the underworld, is a hand grenade. (As if you didn't know.)

But that, if course, is just silly supposition. Everybody on the Rag staff, anyway, knows that:

1. Earl E. May owns a profitable produce business in Shenandoah, Iowa.

2. His son goes to Nebraska university.

3. He sent the Daily Nebraskan staff a goodly amount of oranges and grapefruit last spring.

Football Fan Discusses This And That About Kansas Tilt

Writer Covers Radio Accounts Thoroughly

Around five hundred Nebraska undergraduate football fans are planning to travel to Mount Oread and watch the Kansas-Nebraska gridiron tussle. Therefore, mutter some of the more bitterly disillusioned Husker followers, there are at least five hundred optimists on the campus.

But, if there are five hundred rosters going to Lawrence, there will be about four thousand students who will listen to the game over the radio. Listening to a football game over the radio has become a national problem.

Charting Game.

The truly conscientious football fan prepares to listen to a radio description of a game by making out a ruled card whereby he can chart the progress of the pigskin's gridiron peregrinations. He then settles down close to the radio with a pencil and waits for the kickoff. The kickoff is made and then the fan discovers his pencil is not sharpened. While sharpening it he hears a great roar from the crowd and rushes back thinking he is missing something. In so doing he breaks his pencil point and the air turns blue. Back finally with a sharp point, he settles down to chart the game beginning with the fourth play. Well, we don't have to tell you what happens next. A punt is made and the fan confidently marks his chart. Then the punt is called back and the fan has to erase his mark. Finally, when the announcer says the ball is about 40 yards from where the fan knows it should be according to his paper calculations, he calmly tears the chart in two and listens intently to the broadcast, glaring at anybody who tries to talk.

Two Kinds.

Some famous sage said, about five minutes ago, that there are two kinds of people in the United States—the kind that listens to the football broadcasts and the kind that doesn't. If you are one of the kind that doesn't, by all means do not try to monopolize the company of one who does on Saturday afternoon. Any attempt at conversation during the game is one-sided. In fact, the people who do listen to radio descriptions are inclined to form a deep dislike for

Frosh Take Vocation Test

Guidance Bureau Plans Aid in Choice of Work

First of a series of vocational guidance tests to be given to freshmen of the arts college by the new vocational testing bureau will be given Saturday morning under the direction of Dr. W. S. Gregory, special advisor to freshmen.

A series of five tests will be given by the bureau in an attempt to determine the abilities, achievements, intelligence, interests, and personality traits of each person taking them. It is on the basis of these tests that the student will be told which vocational field is most suitable to him.

All tests are to be given individually since no two persons have the same traits. The tests given to each freshman will be selected by Dr. Gregory on the basis of a vocational guidance chart which he had previously filled out as a part of his freshman lecture course.

Results of the tests, which will be known only to Dr. Gregory and the students taking them, will be discussed during a conference to be arranged by the student. Also it will take from 10 to 30 hours to complete the series, no student will spend more than three hours each day taking the tests.

According to Dr. Gregory, the bureau will not be able to test more than 15 freshmen each week. All freshmen interested in taking the tests are required to apply for an assignment at some future date at which time they will be tested. Starting next week the bureau will be giving the examinations every day.

Tassels End Cornhusker Sales Soon

Pep Group to Wind Up Campaign by Tuesday

Deep in the last week of the Cornhusker campaign, members of Tassels are quickening the tempo of their salesmanship that they may by Tuesday reach the goal of sales set by them three weeks ago when they undertook the drive at the request of the yearbook business manager, Max Horn.

Tassels have been in charge of the Cornhusker campaign for a good many years, inasmuch as the Tassel organization has consistently been able to make the most contacts of any group on the campus. Last year the Tassels sold 600 Cornhuskers for the annual business staff, and with that as an example of Tassel selling ability, this year, Virginia Nolte, president of the pep group, has set the goal at 1,000.

Cash Prizes.

Cash prizes will reward the girls who sell the most Cornhuskers. Gifts of $10, $5, and $1 will be given to the first, second, and third winners. Already the Cornhusker staff has rewarded all the pep organization members by giving them each two passes to downtown theaters.

Along with regular staff salesmen, the Cornhusker expects to sell 2,500 books before they go to press in the spring, and after that time it will be impossible to obtain one of them, for only enough copies to cover the subscription list will be ordered.

Beauty Queens.

As in the past, each sorority or organized house will have an opportunity to submit a candidate for the beauty queen section with each 20 Cornhuskers sold. Prices of the Cornhusker are $4.50, cash payment, or $4.75, two dollars of which is down payment, if the book is purchased on the installment plan.

400 Attend Coed Counselor Dinner

Hobby groups, another project of the Counselor board, sponsored the entertainment of the evening and made their first public appearances of the year. The tap dancing group, under the leadership of Mary Kline offered two dances and the dramatics group, led by Tex Roselle Rounds, presented a skit. Music was furnished by a trio composed of Ardith and Miriam Hackman and Maxine Maddy, accompanied by Miss Rounds.

N. U. Fans Board Football Special At Dawn Saturday

Debate Squad Announced

Kirshenbaum, Nemetz, Gustafson, Turkel Win

Out of the ten upperclassmen who competed last night at University hall for the intercollegiate varsity debate title, Sam Kirshenbaum, Milton Gustafson, Harold Turkel and Don Nemetz were the four men chosen for the first teams. The question was resolved that the government should cease using public funds for stimulating business.

Kirshenbaum and Gustafson upheld the affirmative arguing that the spending of public funds is not an asset to business but an injury. Harold Turkel and Don Nemetz, speaking for the negative of the question, refuted with the statement that business has but one weapon, the government, and this is the only way to alleviate the depression facing industry. This will mean increasing purchasing power, and increasing purchasing power means increasing production. Edward Carraher and Otto Woerner were selected as alternates.

The four men on the first team will meet Drake university Wednesday, Nov. 23, in two debates on the Nebraska campus. Dec. 7, 8 and 9, the four men will represent Nebraska at Topeka's student legislative assembly.

Prof. Thomas J. Fitzpatrick, George Healey, attorney and Harold A. Soderlund, business man, were judges for the competition.

Engineers Hear Polaroid Lecture

Wheelwright Discusses Light Control Material

George W. Wheelwright, III, former professor of physics at Harvard university, gave a demonstration lecture on polaroid, newly invented transparent sheet material with ability to control light, to an all engineers convocation last night. Mr. Wheelwright described polaroid as "an industrial and scientific revolution with more than 800 possible applications."

The lecture, under the auspices of the Engineers' club of Lincoln, attracted a large audience to the social science auditorium.

Mr. Wheelwright gave a demonstration of a few polaroid's many uses including three dimensional motion pictures in full color, the creation of color in colorless materials, the inspection of glass for revealing flaws and imperfections and a demonstration showing polaroid's glareless illumination quality.

Polaroid was invented by Edwin H. Land, who was a student under Mr. Wheelwright at Harvard. Attracted and interested in Land's work, Wheelwright formed a partnership with him and the two scientists perfected the material to its present state. Mr. Wheelwright is currently engaged in a speaking tour explaining polaroid and its uses to business men who visualize its use in their industries.

2,000 Team Followers To Swell Cheering At Saturday's Battle

Before most of the campus has taken their morning yawns and yaps early tomorrow morning, some 300 Nebraska university students will be speeding toward Lawrence, Kas., on the special student train which leaves Lincoln from the Burlington depot at 7 o'clock.

Embellished by Corn Cob red sweaters, Tassel scarlet and cream uniforms, band uniforms, and bulk of the Freshman football team, the migration will arrive in Lawrence at 11:59, where a parade will be formed which will march to the center of the city's business district.

The final hop to Mount Oread, Jayhawk citadel, will be made by buses arranged to be on hand to carry Corn Cobs, Tassels, and others to the Kansas university campus.

Tickets for the train and for the game are being sold in the university athletic office in the coliseum upon presentation of identification cards and pictures. Only students will be allowed places on the train, a fact which promises to result in a jamboree for those making the trip.

Hundreds are making the trip by auto, insuring a Nebraska routing section of students and Husker fans of nearly 2,000. After the game, Husker travelers will have until 1 o'clock Sunday morning to bemoan a loss or celebrate a victory, at which time the return special will leave Lawrence for Lincoln, where it will arrive at 6:30.

Kansas City will be the haven of many after the game parties, as will the various fraternity and sorority houses on the Jayhawk campus. Homecoming in Lawrence indicates parties and celebrations for visitors whose organizations have chapter houses on the K. U. campus.

Tickets on the train are $4.20 for the round trip; game tickets are $2.25. Husker followers will have seats in the center of the stadium, opposite the Kansas rooting section.

Major Biff Jones and his grid-ers will leave tonight around 10 o'clock, via the rails, in sleeping cars. The crowd following them Saturday morning will be with the team just the same, even tho they start nine hours later.
