Forum Hears Works of Music School Head

Compositions of Director Howard Kirkpatrick of the University School of Music composed the program of the Musical Forum last night in the Union. Dr. Kirkpatrick, Grace Finch, First Presbyterian organist, Carl Steckelberg, and numerous students played some of the director's best compositions which put into music some of the most beautiful verses of famous writers.

The concert quartet was composed of Alitina Tullia, soprano; Mary Shockey, alto; Reuben Walt, tenor, and Ed Boehmer, bass. Music was also given by the string quartet of Margaret Porter, first violin; Marjorie Smith, second violin; Alice Blackstone, viola, and June Meek, 'cello, in addition to duets and solos.

Carl Steckelberg, violinist of the school of music faculty, and Betty Zabriske of the 'cello department played an introduction to one of the numbers of Kirkpatrick's "Fireworshippers" cycle.

The program follows:

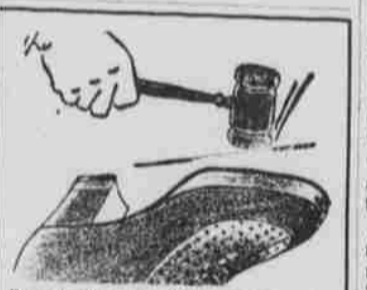

- 1. I will Lift My Eyes, quartet.
- Light As Angel Shapes, contralto solo; contralto and soprano duet.
- How Sweetly Does the Moonbeam Smile, introduction and quartet; Carl Steckelberg, violin; Betty Zabriske, 'cello.
- The Babe, Name of Fear, from "Fireworshippers" cycle, bass.
- Evening, from "Black Hills Suite," string quartet.
- Music Dance.
- God Is Our Refuge, quartet.
- Four Out Your Heart, soprano and tenor duet.
- Ghosts, tenor.
- According to the Heart, quartet.
- If Love Were What the Rose Is, soprano.
- The Sower, quartet.

Browsing Among the Books

It was predicted some time ago in this column, more new books are now being devoted to discussions of the current international difficulties than to any other subject... Timely is Dorothy Thompson's "Refugees," a discussion of the attempts to resettle the Jewish refugees, and a review of the results of the Evian conference... "While England Sleeps" a current best seller by the dynamic British conservative, Winston Churchill, tells the tale of the English failure to meet the demands of a new Germany, and predicts a result disastrous to the English civilization.

"Twilight in Vienna" is Willie Frischauer's conception of what happened during the last hectic hours before Hitlerian annexation of Austria... James Truslow Adams, renowned for his "Epic of America" spins now the yarn of "Building the British Empire."

Kemat Ataturk, the late dictator of Turkey, along with Stalin, Hitler, and all the rest of Europe's big men, is seen thru the eyes of foreign correspondent, Isaac Marcrosson, in his new book, "Turbulent Years"... Bruce Lockhart, international traveler, likewise sees Europe, but from a different angle, "Guns and Butter" takes the reader right thru from the madness of the Austrian nazis to the defiant, but pitilessly abandoned, Czechs...

And so the list grows larger day by day, as each observer catches in on the huge American demand for foreign books... Anschluss, Munich, Canton, Paris, Jerusalem, Lima—an incessant, unceasing torrent of events, commented to interested people faster than ever before, and likewise interpreted to a frenzied, yet somehow indifferent, world...

MUSIC BOOKS.

The important letters of Paderewski, the great pianist, have been gathered by Mary Lawton, in the "Paderewski Memoirs"... Lawrence Gilman, author of "Wagners Operas" has just completed a biography of Toscanini, the "prince of music;" the book is something more than a biography, including a discussion of the great composer, thus introducing to the casual bystander the greater of the classical symphonies... Likewise new is "The Art of Singing," a study in singing style and music technique, by William Henderson... Daniel Mason, somewhat of a musician himself, reviews great music of the last half century, in his recent "Music in My Time and Other Reminiscences"...

Pessimism is displayed by Andre Malraux, the great "novelist of revolutions," in his book "Man's Fate," and Katov, who makes the supreme sacrifice, is deserted by the author, left to his fate, a horribly painful and torturous death. Yet from the pen of this dynamic author comes a ray of hope, a belief, a conviction, that out from the regimented chaos, which is Fascism, will evolve an order which is fit for men. Malraux is a revolutionist himself, fighting, living in the most degrading conditions, working against the most passionate of human emotions, in order that an ideal might survive. His new book, "Man's Hope," answers somehow the question which was evaded in the former, and presents more over an appeal to fight, not against something, but for something... Vivid, shocking, melodramatic, "Man's Hope" is perhaps the best piece of literature to emerge from the Spanish fracas, out of the fight of "democracy against dictatorship"....
