Point board tells purpose of new rules

Old maximum too high to diffuse activities in sufficient degree

(Continued from Page 1.) thoro and complete account of activity points and participation is to be kept. Students having activity credits will be expected to report them to the board in room 305 of the Union. Brewster will be in room 305 every Thursday afternoon for the remainder of the semester. Separate activity cards can be checked and brought up to date at that time,

May Drop Activities,

A man is not eligible for an ofthe if upon taking that office, he will be overpointed. If he wishes to be officially dropped from the membership of some organization so that he will not be overpointed he may do so before taking over the new office.

Any student who is over pointed is expected to remedy this situation as soon as possible. The board has the power to penalize any man who does not keep his points at the maximum or below.

The board feels that this new plan will spread out and restrict the activities so more people will have a chance for participation. At the same time it will lighten the activity load of others.

Four science departments use greenhouse built for one corps seeks

Attendant reveals lack of equipment, space

By Clyde Martz.
Sapped from lack of sunlight by overhanging palms, the great banana tree that formerly grew six foot leaves and bunches of fruit, no longer having adequate room to expand, has shrunk to half its former size,

It's crowded position as well as the dead and withered plants show realistically enough the urgent need of new greenhouse facilities on the campus.

Built some years ago at a time when the university had a much smaller enrolment, the present sunhouses far from fill the need of the students for whom they are needed. According to a statement made by Max Schnittler, care-taker, houses three times the size of the present structure would yet be inadequate. In addition to the botany students for whom the buildings were built, biology, bacteriology, and agronomy students have been performing experiments there for the last few years.

Partitions Have Been Removed. In an effort to provide added room, the partitions which formerly separated the houses into divisions, each adapted to the growth of particular types of vegetation, have been removed and stands and tables widened. Tho some additional room has been thus acquired, it has been at the cost of greenhouse necessities.

No longer are particular plants given their climatic conditions, but all are crowded together in the same rooms, none growing or tions cared for in the way that they should. Tables are now too large to use advantageously, it being almost impossible to reach the back portions to trim and prune plants which have been pushed back into the corners.

Ferns hang over the sides and are brushed and broken by passing people in the narrow confines of the room. In places the plants are growing so close together that it is impossible for a person to pass unless he pushes the dead foliage out of the way.

The work is being done constantly in some portions of the buildings, it is impossible to perform experiments properly in such close quarters. Many portions of the floor are so densely shaded by overgrowing plant life that attempts to get satisfactory results must either be done at the expense of other growths or hindered in its own normal existance.

Attendant Makes Changes.

Efforts have been made again and again to create an interest in the dire need of the botany students. But the call is apparently uheard. Whenever changes are made they must be done bit by bit in the spare time, which is very seldom, of the greenhouse attendant. All the new tables, the removal of the former partitions, as well as the changing of pots and tubs has been done tentatively by Mr. Schnittler.

The greenhouses, like many other of the buildings on the campus have been wholly neglected. They are antiquated and crowded. Even when investigaare made into needed

Officers lecture here today and tomorrow; talks open to public

In an effort to find university students for their new air training extension program, Lieut, L. M. Kreiger and a staff of three men from the U. S. Naval Training Reserves will hold a series of lectures and interviews here today and to-

A moving picture depicting the Naval Reserve's training course will be shown by a member of the staff this morning, in Nebraska hall at 10:30, while a lecture is scheduled for Temple theater in the afternoon, Lieutenant Kreiger and his men will interview and examine students who might be interested in making application for this training Friday and Saturday when they are not holding discus-

The Navy department's plan includes one year's instruction at the Naval Air station at Pensacola, Fla., during which time the student receives $75 a month plus board and room. If, at the end of the training period he desires to continue with the work and is selected, he may be placed on active duty with an aircraft squadron, where he is paid $125 a month plus expenses.

After four years of duty the student is connected inactively with the Naval Reserve base nearest his home. Those who complete only one year of service are ade-quately prepared for commercial changes in the various departments of the school, this particular building has been wholly overlooked. Yet all experimental work in four large science divisions depend upon the facilities of the greenhouse.

Students for this service are chosen from senior students and graduates. The lectures to be at the university are open to all stu-

The university has grown up; the dependency on this branch has grown immensely and has expanded to include three other sciences. In the opinion of those working in this field certain provisions must be made at once to expand the potentialities of the department and bring it up to date.

Kosmet Klub will meet to discuss spring show

Members of Kosmet Klub will meet this afternoon at 5 o'clock in their office in the Student Union building. Tentative plans for the meeting include discussion of plans for the spring show annually spon-sored by the club.

College unrest due to lack of religion says N. Y. dean

NEW YORK, N. Y. (I.P.). Much of the uncertainty and unrest evident on many college campuses, and in the nation at large, has come through disregard of religion, declared Dr. Irving H. Berg, dean of New York university.

"In history we discover that one of the dominating motives of all human activity through the ages has been man's relation to religion. In altogether too many educational institutions this subject is either taboo or treated in so trivial a manner that one wonders if the students ever heard of it."

The time has certainly come when we should re-examine our whole educational structure in the light of universal human experience and stop the pursuit of knowledge merely as an end in

Deadline for submitting Follies skits falls today

All skits for the annual A. W. S. Coed Follies must be submitted to Mrs. Westover In Ellen Smith hall by five o'clock Friday, according to Janet Lau, A. W. S. board member in charge of the show. At the same time candidates for best dressed girl and models for the spring style revue may also be presented by organized women's groups.
