Negro leader to lecture here Feb. 15

Program to help raise scholarship fund for N. U. colored students

Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, regarded as the Negro world's leading intellectual, will deliver an address on "Democracy" here in Lincoln Feb. 15 at St. Paul Methodist church. Dr. DuBois' appearance is sponsored by the Lincoln Young Peoples Forum as part of their program to build up a scholarship fund to aid Negroes in the University of Nebraska.

Author, historian, economist, sociologist, DuBois has taken advanced study at Harvard and the University of Berlin. His book, "Black Reconstruction" is outstanding in its treatment of the post Civil War Negro problems bringing to bear on the problem of a strong socialist point of view. In a field bitterly argued by biased northern and southern whites, a book by this well educated Negro has been well received.

Sounds Warning. Dealing with the "Inter-racial Implications of the Ethiopian Crisis" for Foreign Affairs magazine, Dr. DuBois sounded this warning: "Italy's indefensible aggression will not prove to the dark people their weakness; rather it will point the path to strength; an understanding between Japan and China will close Asia to white aggression and India need no longer hesitate between passive resistance and open rebellion. Even black men will realize that Europe today holds Africa in leash primarily with African troops, a religion of humility, vague promises and skillfully encouraged jealousies. One of these days the very troops by which Europe holds Africa may cease to play the part assigned them."

While predicting early in the war that Italy would win, Dr. DuBois declared that, whether Italy won or lost, race hatred would be increased. He expressed his opinion that the effort to subject the black man is vain in the long run and is looking logically to Japan as the leader of all the colored peoples in their struggle to shake off white dominance.

The Catawba college yearbook is called "The Swastika," but has no connection with a well known totalitarian government.

Jacks to discuss Greek stage, Nobel winners

The debt that many Nobel prize winners owe to the ancient Greek tragedy will be expounded by Prof. Jacks of the Creighton university classics department for the local Classics club Tuesday. The meeting will be in parlors A, B and C of the Student Union beginning at 8 o'clock.

Under the title "Greek Tragedy and Some Nobel Prize Winners," Prof. Jacks will attempt "to show that some proof can certainly be advanced and has probably been found indicating that some of the greatest Nobel prize winners in recent years (Mann, Anatole France, Sigrid Undset, Galsworthy and O'Neill) have derived much information, much technique and something even of story and plot from the Attic stage."
