Why has student interest in extra-curricular activities and projects waned? Why are only 1500 copies of the Cornhusker sold as compared with sales of 3000 and more a few years ago? Why do only 2500 students of the University's 6500 purchase yearly subscriptions to the DAILY NEBRASKAN? Why has the number of workers on all campus publications and organizations decreased markedly in recent years?

These questions and others are one of the principle concerns of campus leaders and Student Union officials. Educators the country over agree that extra-curricular activities are an integral part of college life. Next to scholarship, surveys have shown, such activities play the most important part in a successful four years. They have as a definite purpose the application of theory studied in class.

The entire activity program, that of various campus organizations as well as that of the Student Union, should and do lead, direct, and avail students of a chance to participate in activities both cultural and educational that will lead toward wholesome and beneficial pursuits. But no matter how broad and inviting this program may be made, without the interest of a large portion of the campus, the system deteriorates into a segregated and highly competitive program. As a result few people are in charge of many tasks with a resultant inferior production in all.

Last year a men's point system was instituted to prevent a minority from controlling a large majority of the extra curricular activities. But not within the system itself, will reformers find their task, but rather on the campus as a whole. Not in the men who are already actively engaged in activities, but rather in the great mass of lethargic, disinterested souls, should the stimulating influence be injected.

One of the principle queries concerning prospective employees raised by personnel agents is that of extra curricular activities. Success in such a pursuit develops qualities of leadership and imagination. It is a field open to every student of this university. The only initiative required is that of a mere interest. The benefits are manifold.

Where can you find so much for so little?

"SING FOR YOUR SUPPER"

BENITO MUSSOLINI, since the early 1920's head of the fascist corporative state, is out looking for some delectable territorial plums. The appetite of the Italian leader has been whetted by noting the apparent relish with which Hitler is devouring and digesting his more recent conquests in central Europe.

Mussolini wants the port of Jibuti in French Somaliland and a controlling interest in the railroad which connects this port with Addis Ababa; a voice in the controlling policy of the Suez canal; and anything from minority rights to full control in Corsica, Tunisia, Nice and Savoia. This last, Savoia, is particularly important to Italy since it is the provincial homeland of Victor Emanuel, who in private life is the King of Italy.

France is willing to grant minority rights to Italians living in Tunis, and joint control over the outlet at Jibuti, but will not grant any important territorial concessions. As a matter of fact, since the beginning of the present crisis France has revoked its previous gift of some African desert lands granted Italy a few years past.

Mussolini is singing loudly in the hope that France and England may feel constrained to grant him some small portion of his demands, and such concessions would constitute an Italian victory. The Italians are not a warlike people, and have never had any marked success in military maneuvers. In spite of the noise which is made by Mussolini's imitation of Tarzan, Italy is not yet ready for a war and does not really desire to provoke such conflict.

THE CASE OF POLAND

Poland, designed by the Treaty of Versailles as a bulwark against Russian aggression, is today's key to the foreign situation. Poland is unwilling to join England, France and Russia in a four power pact to block the German advances. Poland is however bound by treaty to France and Russia, both eventual aims of the rising German power.

Joseph Beck, sometimes called "the wildest diplomat in all of Europe," is on his way to London to sound out English feeling. Beck is slightly pro-Russian in his sympathies and this creates an internal conflict for Poland. Marshal Smidgly-Ritz, militarist who wields political control in Poland, is German in his beliefs. Beck and Smidgly-Ritz, Germany and Russia. Which way will Poland turn?

The selected area for Hitler's next aggressive movement, smuggled in between Germany proper and East Prussia and Memel, Poland is economically dependent on the reich. The Polish corridor with its outlet at the Free City of Danzig already under Nazi domination is Poland's only exit to the Baltic Sea and this entry to the Atlantic (thru the Baltic to the North sea) may be shut off by German fleets on the west. Poland also lies between those areas over which Germany has exerted a great political and economic influence, and the imposition of high tariff barriers by Lithuania, Hungary, and greater Germany would leave Russia as the only possible free market available, and Russia is too interested in her own internal market problems to worry much about Poland.

Shall we say "Hail Poland. Hail and farewell."

Rather Have a Girl Than a PIPE?

Fella, I wouldn't trade my Grabow for any woman! It doesn't reek from "Angel's Love Potion" perfumes, but has a fragrant, mild odor. Women get mean—break dates—a pipe is always ready—in the same sweet mood. It takes a dozen dates to really know a girl. A Grabow needs no "break-in," it's pre-smoked.
